The Week in Grain

Compiled for the Mount Joy Bulletin, at Mount Joy, Pa., by Van L. Bear & Co., Pennsylvania Building, Philadelphia, Pa., by D. B. Lehman, Manager, Woolworth Building, Lancaster, Penna.

Phila., Pa., Aug. 12, 1912. The August report of the Department of Agriculture was easily the news feature of the week, altho it contributed little to known conditions aside from confirming abundant yields of all cereals. A small improvement in winter wheat leaves the final production materially below last season, but a record yield in the Northwest establishes the final production of wheat above that of two seasons past, and something in excess of normal. The Corn crop, also, notwithstanding that low temperatures late in July reduced the condition from that of July 1, will still exceed that of last year by two and three quarters hundred million, and is only exceeded by two other yields. The Oats production not only establishes a new high record, but is much in excess of any previous crop. With Rye and Barley both showing bumper yields, the total yield of all classes exceeds that of 1911 by fully two hundred million bushels.

In a price way, there has been little in the way of excited movement. Cash markets were firm, especially for Corn, and the nearest deliveries met some competitive buying from shorts in consequence. The deferred deliveries as a rule have been inclined to weaken, altho the heavy decline since a month ago, has placed going values at a level where inroads are slow. There is appearance of good commission house buying of the list for investors. This with good inquiry from abroad, where production is below last year in its grand total, should broaden as the season progresses, for present prices are low.

HIS PREFERENCE FOR HOME

Oliver Wendell Holmes Unable to Get Any Real Pleasure in the Vaunted "Tavern."

Don't talk to me about taverns! There is just one genuine, clean, decent, palatable thing occasionally to be had in them—namely, a boiled egg. The soups taste pretty good sometimes, but their sources are involved in a darker mystery than that of the Nile. Omelettes taste as if they had been carried in the waiter's hat, or fried in an old boot. I ordered scrambled eggs one day. It must be that they had been scrambled for by somebody, but who—who in the possession of a sound reason could have scrambled for what I had set before me under that name? Buttermilk I am wondering why the taverns always keep it until it is old. Fool that I am! As if the taverns did not know that if it was good it would be eaten, which is not what they want. Then the waiters, with their napkins—what don't they do with those napkins! Mention any one thing of which you think you can say with truth, "That they do not do." Every six months a tavern should burn to the ground, with all its traps, its "properties," its beds and pots and kettles and start afresh from its ashes like John Phoenix-Squibob.

No; give me home, or a home like mine, where all is clean and sweet, where coffee has pre-existed in the berry and tea has still faint recollections of the pigtails that dangled about the plant from which it was picked, where butter has not the prevailing character which Pope assigned to Denham, where soup could look you in the face if it had "eyes" (which it has not), and where the comely Anne or the gracious Margaret takes the place of these napkin bearing animals.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

DISSOLVE BONE IN THROAT

Use of Lemon Juice at Critical Time is a Thing Worth Keeping in Mind.

Sitting at a planked shad dinner in Yonkers, a laughing guest drew a bone into his throat and he began to strangle. Some one suggested that the sufferer swallow a fragment of dry bread.

"Oh, no," exclaimed an Ossining man. "Don't give him bread. It might catch the bone and it might not. Give him something that is sure to give relief." Beckoning to a waiter, he said: "Bring me a lemon, cut in two." And it was brought without delay. Taking one section, he offered it to the choking guest and told him to suck the juice and to swallow it slowly. Directions were faithfully followed, and in about a quarter of a minute the afflicted one placed the half lemon on his plate, looked into the anxious faces around the table and smiled.

"Well, Joe," said one, "how about it?"

"It's gone," was the reply, "the bone has slipped down."

"Not exactly that," said the Ossining man. "The bone slipped down all right, but it was melted first by the citric acid. I never knew it to fail to dissolve a fishbone. You can test the power of lemon juice by dropping some on the fishbones you may have lying on your plate."

Several diners tried the experiment. In each case the acid reduced the bone to liquid gelatine.

Fawn and St. Bernard as Companions.

At the little village of Bauma, in Switzerland, a farmer recently found a young fawn in one of his fields.

Fearing that if left alone without its mother some mischief would befall it, he took it home and did everything possible for it. Now, he has come to have a large St. Bernard dog, and this dog and the fawn took to each other.

The fawn slept in the dog's kennel, and when it grew a little older and went out on its walks abroad, the dog accompanied it, and defended it against the attacks of other dogs.

Sometimes the St. Bernard and the fawn would be absent in the woods and fields for a whole day, but they always returned at night, the doors and gate being left open for them. The fawn is now much taller than the St. Bernard, and yet the dog still goes out with it.

Praise Be, the Brother Was Lying.

Police courts are not always marked by an atmosphere of piety, but the exception to the rule occurred in a court where a very religious man, against whom one of the neighbors had made a complaint, was being tried for some trivial offense. The complaining witness was called to the stand to relate his side of the story, and the defendant listened closely for several minutes. Then his personal feelings overrode court etiquette and he rushed up to the judge, fervently exclaiming: "Your honor, the brother is lying. Praise the Lord!"

Limit of the Borrowing Habit.

Little Margie was a frequent visitor at the Jones home, going there on errands of borrowing many times each day. On this occasion she asked the loan of a cooking utensil. But Mrs. Jones had become very much out of patience at the continual borrowing and sent word by Margie that she "had other fish to fry."

Imagine her surprise when in a few moments her neighbor's little Margie again appeared in her doorway, hesitating:

"Mozzer thaid pleathe to thend thome of the fith, pleathe."

The latest Babbitt innovation in this State is the establishment of complete, up-to-date stores in cities such as Lancaster, York, Allentown, Hanover, known as Talbot stores, where Babbitt Trademarks are accepted the same as money in buying—10 trademarks being equal to 5c. and 20 trademarks equal to 10c. and so on.

Babbitt quality has been as steady and as standard as the sun.

All over America, in every state, in many thousand homes, every day of the year, women are using and praising the old, reliable Babbitt's Soap for hundreds of household uses. On the farm, in the home, in the stores, in the factory, in the office—everywhere you will find that every user trusts Babbitt's Soaps—just as they trust sterling on Silver.
