

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

Mrs. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynchburg, Va., writes: "It is six years since my health gave me female trouble and all the doctors I employed tried and I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took in all, bottles of "Favorite Prescription" and two of "Golden Medical Discovery," and now I am able to do all my household work, and have gained fifteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your "Favorite Prescription." It is the only medicine on earth."

Selling the House

By Herbert Droege

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Times were hard out in Kansas during the fall of 1907, and the real estate concern of J. Bixby & Co. felt itself so hard pressed that Mr. Jermy Bixby, president, sole proprietor and only representative of said above business, experiences a sincere regret when he came down to his office one morning, following a night on which he had mortgaged his brain to the effect that he had proposed marriage to Miss Jessie Carter, the village schoolmarm. And, worse, he had been accepted.

Jermy's affection for Miss Jessie was of the deepest and most sanguine sort. He had felt it for years, since he had first settled in the place, but further than showing her little attentions and accompanying her to church each Sabbath evening, he had made no open profession of his feelings toward her until under the spell of the moonlight and that October evening, the night before, he did the thing he meant not to do.

All in good time, Jermy had intended to ask Miss Jessie to become his bride. But he was awaiting the day when he could feel himself established before making an offer of such serious character. And that day had almost arrived.

Out in one of the new additions to the town that had been plotted only the preceding summer, Jermy had erected a house on a couple of lots that had fallen to him as a part of the commission due him for promoting the new section. For balance on account with the town site company, he had accepted more lots.

So far as a short-sighted mortal can judge, Jermy considered that he was on the high road to his heart's desire. He took every dollar he had, and borrowed a little besides, to put into the new house, which he intended as a home for himself and Jessie. Of course he would have to have some hold furniture and to pay living expenses for a month or two, or until he should be able to get a commission somewhere.

For such exigencies, he had reckoned on the additional lots. With things booming in that end of town, he figured it would be a matter only of time to go to the local bank and pledge his property for whatever small sum he might ask. And so it would have been, but for the panic.

"But She Doesn't Know."

As he entered his office the morning after that night when things had gone riotous in his breast, Jermy found the mail he had just taken from the postoffice on his desk. An envelope on the top of the package caught his eye. He opened it and found a statement from the local bank, calling attention to his overdrawn account.

It was this little printed slip that had caused Jermy to regret his proposal as he went about kindling fires in the flat rectangular wood stove that stood in the center of the room. At first he thought of going to Miss Jessie and calling off the engagement. After more deliberate consideration, he resolved to take his troubles to Mrs. Bain, the landlady, who had watched his courtship encouragingly during the last two years.

"That evening he arrived home late for supper, purposely, and manages to remain at his meal until after the other boarders had left the table. Then he arose to assist Mrs. Bain with the dishes, in the course of which he led up the conversation to the kind-hearted matron of his dilemma."

"But, laws, you needn't worry," exclaimed Mrs. Bain. "Jessie, you know, has saved up money from her teaching, and wouldn't hesitate to advance you a little, if you need it, especially you are going to marry her."

"But that's just it, Mrs. Bain," he remonstrated. "I couldn't think of letting her do it."

"Let her? She'd just do it anyhow, if she knew."

"But she doesn't know, and won't know, and besides she couldn't draw more than just a small amount from the bank at present, even if she had a million dollars on deposit."

"Don't you just be too sure," returned the woman. "That's a mighty smart girl, and if she wanted to do something, she'd do it somehow, money or no bank."

Mrs. Bain went out to shut up her chickens for the night, and Jermy took a chair on the front porch to smoke. Later, he went inside to caution the landlady to say nothing to Jessie; but he could find her nowhere. She had not returned when he retired to his room near midnight.

The next morning Mrs. Bain knocked at his door a half hour earlier than usual. He turned to his watch and observed the difference in time, but dressed and went downstairs. He found Mrs. Bain alone.

THE GAME SEASON

A Few Birds and Animals May be Shot After September 1

The coming game season will be of unusual interest to us, on the fact that it is likely to be the last season in which the people of the state may hunt without paying a license. A determined effort will be made to have the next legislature pass a hunter's license law by which every hunter will be obliged to pay $1.

The first game animal to be available to the hunters of this section is the raccoon. Up until a year ago this animal was not protected but now it may be hunted only from September 1 to December 31, inclusive. A number of water birds come in on the same date, duck and geese being included.

The game to come in season next is the bear and woodcock, both of which are available after October 1. Bear may be killed until the first of the year but woodcock may be hunted only until Dec. 31. There is no limit to the number of bears that may be killed but no hunter may kill more than ten woodcock in one day, twenty in a week or fifty in a season.

On Nov. 1 the hunting season comes in with a rush, the majority of the animals and birds that are regarded as good game in this vicinity, being available on and after that date. Included in the list are pheasants, quail or partridge, wild turkeys, rabbits and squirrels. The season of all the game in this class closes with December 15.

Of the ruffed grouse or pheasant five may be killed in a day, twenty in a week or fifty in a season. Ten partridges may be killed in a day, 40 in a week or 75 in a season. Wild turkeys are limited to one a day or two in a season. Of the black fox or gray squirrels the number is limited to six of the combined kinds in a day. Ten rabbits are the limit for a day.

There is but half a month in which deer may be killed, the season starting with Nov. 15 and ending with the 30th. One male with horns visible above the hair is the limit for the season.

Among the birds that are not protected and which may be killed at any time are the blue jay, English sparrow, starling, different kinds of hawks, crow and barred and horned owls. Among the animals that can be killed at any time are the pine or red squirrel, possum, wood-chuck or ground hog, mink, weasel, wildcat and polecat.

Another Auto Accident
Another automobile accident occurred Saturday evening shortly before 8 o'clock on the State Road, about a mile from East Petersburg, and not far from the scene of an auto accident on Saturday night a week ago. The car which figured in last Saturday night's accident was operated by Chester Groff, the owner, son of Wayne I. Groff, of Leola, and with him were Charles and Lester Cooper, David Bair and four young ladies. All but one in the party were injured. The accident was due to the careless manner in which the chauffeur rounded a curve.

The banker led the way into another room, followed by Jermy and his bride.
"Just a little business," Mr. Stanley said, by way of introduction. He fumbled with some papers and drew out a fountain pen.
"Here's a certificate of deposit to your credit, Mr. Bixby, for $1,700," he resumed. "Now you will please fill out the space left blank."
"What name?" asked Jermy, taking the pen.
"Mrs.—uhm," as he cleared his voice, maintaining a stolid expression, "Mrs. Jessie Bixby."
Jermy was dumfounded.
"What!" dropping the pen and turning to his bride. "You—you?" he cried and grasped her in his arms. "You bought the place?"
"Yes," she replied.
"And just to think that the deal alone wasn't half the bargain."

Average Sleep is Eight Hours.
Usually the amount of sleep is in inverse ratio to the strength and development of consciousness. Thus, children need more sleep than adults. Some men need very little rest, and the same may be said of women. However, eight hours is the average amount required by the human body to restore its vitality by complete rest. If less is taken one's health is apt to be impaired. A good night's sleep will do more toward building up general health than all the tonics known.

Light Summer Reading.
An advertisement of a book on the Titanic disaster appears in The Jefferson City Post. It says: "Entertainingly stating the facts as related by eye witnesses. Everything told in agreeable terms that lend a degree of fascination and render the work appreciable."—Kansas City Times.

CONVENTION IN LANCASTER

County Sunday School Association Will Meet October 17.

The Lancaster County Sunday School Association will hold its annual convention Thursday, October 17, in the First Presbyterian church in Lancaster. There will be forenoon, afternoon and evening sessions and conferece of the elementary grade superintendents, Sunday school superintendents and district officers. With delegates from the 360 Sunday schools in the county, besides the officers and others actively interested in Sunday School work, this promises to be the largest convention of the kind ever held in the county.

W. G. Landes, of Philadelphia, secretary of the State Sabbath School Association, and Mrs. M. Baldwin, State worker, who has given much study and active work in the primary work of the schools, will deliver addresses, and other able talent will take part in the exercises.

Miss Mary E. Swope, 102 North Plum street, Lancaster, secretary of the county association, and Jacob G. Landes, of Lititz, the county field secretary, hope to have a complete census of the work accomplished by the schools during the year ending September 15. This will be made possible by the prompt response to the blank statistical cards sent out.

The State Sunday School Association, at its fiftyth convention in Philadelphia October 8, 9, 10 and 11, will award a bronze medal to the oldest worker in Sunday schools in each county.

One of the features of this State convention will be the big parade of men from the Organized Adult Bible Classes. H. Frank Eschleman is superintendent of this branch of Sunday school work in the county.

THE SHIPPEN SCHOOL.
The trustees of the Shippen School of Lancaster held an enthusiastic meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mr. H. S. Williamson, when steps were taken for enlarging the institution along the lines that have been under consideration for some time. Shippen School, through its excellent work the past few years, has taken a front rank among leading educational institutions in this section, and it is the intention of the trustees to still further increase its usefulness, especially in this community, where its influence for good has been felt to a marked extent.

MIDDLETOWN FAIR

Big Dauphin County Exhibition Will Be Held Next Week

The 13th annual exhibition of the Middletown Fair Association will be held at Middletown Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 10, 11, 12 and 13, and if promises to eclipse all previous exhibitions. A small army of men have been employed for some time getting the grounds in readiness for the horsemen and scores of exhibitors who will fill every foot of ground within the big enclosure.

The applications for exhibiting space this year are greatly in excess of all previous years, and the public will be given the best exhibition ever presented in Dauphin County.

Many horses for the great racing events are already on the fastest steppers in this section of Pennsylvania. The Midway attractions will be especially numerous, furnishing entertainment and amusement all day long. There will be three and four big racing events each day on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with free vaudeville each day of the fair in front of the grand stand.

The poultry exhibition this year will be larger than ever and will include the best of every breed. Free band concerts every afternoon. Every day a big day. Don't miss it.

NEW TOWN

Mrs. Calvin Little returned to her home in Lancaster after a visit to her sister, Mrs. Francis Fogle.

Rev. Gibble and family of Lebanon, were visitors last week to their friends and relatives in this place.

Mr. Henry Snyder and family, Messrs. Eaby and Sanders and Abner Hershey all of Mount Joy, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weaver.

Mr. Amos Sneath is nursing a sore finger at present, that member being badly mashed by a rock, which was thrown on his hand while he was working on a stone crusher.

The public school in this place commenced their regular term of seven months on Monday with Mr. Alvin Shonk teacher of the secondary and Miss Edith Spring of the primary.

Mr. John Rhoads of this place, carried a piece of hollow fence rail home to his shoulder last week and while in the act of converting it into kindling wood was greatly surprised by the sudden appearance of a very lively copperhead snake. The reptile was 2 1/2 feet in length and had been concealed in the rail. It was quickly killed by Mr. Rhoads.

Tobacco raisers are busy cutting their crops. The uninjured portion of the crop is of good growth and spread, although some was transplanted late. No buyers have been around so far this season to contract for the crop in field while in New York buyers have contracted for a large portion of the crop in different localities at prices ranging from 11 to 15 cents.

Old Folks and Harvest Home
On Sunday, in the Evangelical church, Rev. I. E. Johnson pastor, a special service was held in honor of the aged, and commemorative of the ingathering of the harvest for another year. The church was beautifully decorated with the different fruits and flowers. A full variety of choice fruit was artistically arranged in the chancel, to represent the bounties of our Heavenly Benefactor. In the morning, service for the Old People was held. The pastor preached a helpful sermon to the aged, basing his remarks on Josh. 14:8, and Num. 14: 24, theme, Caleb's Inheritance. A duet was sung, entitled "The Crowning Day," with good effect, and was very much appreciated. After the sermon the pastor, in a few well chosen remarks, presented Mrs. Elizabeth Evans with a beautiful bouquet. Mrs. Evans is a charter member of the church and was the oldest person present. There were 19 persons present whose aggregate was 1352 years.

Harvest Home services were celebrated in the evening. "Harvest Home Gratitude" was the pastor's subject, using for his text Matt. 6: 11. The choir rendered several selections of music which added inspiration to the occasion. Both services were well attended, and were a rich means of Grace to all present. The large variety of fruits on display, were donated to the pastor and his family, and were thankfully received.

PASSED AN UNQUIET NIGHT

Traveler, Lost in the Bush, Was Glad to Do Without the Blessings of Slumber.

But I had never given a thought to the course I had taken in my gallop across the veldt. I kept on and on, and before long it grew dark and somewhat cold. So I dismounted, and after thinking it over, I knee-haltered the horse and let him go, crept head first into a large ant-bear hole for a night's lodging, and made myself as comfortable as possible under the circumstances, using the biesbok hide for a blanket. The night was dark as pitch.

Sleep was out of question. I suppose it was the haunches and the raw hide that attracted the creatures, but before long it really seemed as if I had settled down in a village of wild pigs and insulted the whole community. To begin with, squealing incessantly, they seemed to be racing round and round in a circle, taking me for its center. Then a number of jackals drawing nearer and nearer, joined in the chorus. But I soon discovered that if I disliked the noise I fairly dreaded the silence. During the quiet spells I knew that something was chewing industriously at the projecting ends of the raw hide in which I was enveloped. It was a hard work for me to keep from kicking incessantly, but whenever I rested for a minute the chewing developed into vigorous tugs, the significance of which it was easy for one in my position to appreciate.

However, I kicked the night through in safety, and early in the morning, to my delight, I found my horse a short distance away, nibbling contentedly at his breakfast.—Atlantic Monthly.

Most Popular Character.
Charles Dickens once received an invitation to a "Walter Scott" party, each guest being expected to attend in the character of one or another of Scott's heroes. On the eventful night, however, greatly to the astonishment of the assembled Rob Roys and Waverleys, Dickens turned up in ordinary evening dress and apparently quite unconcerned. At length the host, who was feeling uneasy, came up to the novelist and inquired:

"Pray, Mr. Dickens, what character of Scott's can you possibly be supposed to represent?"
"Character," said Dickens. "Why, sir, a character you will find in every one of Scott's novels. I, I went on, smilingly, "am the 'gentle reader.'"

Terrible Ordeal.
"It was perfectly frightful," said Chubbleigh. "There we ran at top speed around the corner, and the first thing I knew we dashed plumb into that grocer's wagon. I guess it must have held a hundred dozen eggs."
"Oh, well, that wasn't so bad, was it?" said Hicks. "You could afford to pay for 'em, couldn't you?"
"Oh, it wasn't that," said Chubbleigh, with a shudder. "But I don't believe there was a good egg in the whole lot!" —Harper's Weekly.

Killed at Conewago.
Sotta Daneff, aged thirty years, watchman at the Conewago cut of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was instantly killed by a freight train at one o'clock on Tuesday morning. Deputy Coroner Harry Miller, of Elizabethtown, was notified, who with his physician, Dr. A. S. Blough, repaired to the scene. A jury was empaneled, which after viewing the body returned a verdict of accidental death. His neck and one arm were broken. The body was taken to an undertaking establishment in Elizabethtown, where it was prepared for burial and shipped to the deceased's brother at Steelton. This is the second fatality that occurred at the same place to watchmen within the last three months.
