

Formal Opening
of Autumn Millinery
at Lancaster's Home of Fashion
Saturday, Monday and Tuesday
September 14, 16 and 17, 1912

The prettiest, most fashionable, most artistic and most varied display of trimmed hats ever before on exhibition in this City. Description or classification is impossible, it is enough that everything authoritative in the millinery world finds a representation in this assembly.

In this season's fashions Paris again predominates. Several direct importations, trimmed by deft French fingers, are conspicuous in our show room on first floor and many other creations embodying Parisian ideas, are no less charming—the product of our own designers who so skillfully succeeded in harmonizing many of the extreme French modes with American and English ideas.

But the most wonderful feature, which will be a revelation to many, is the extremely moderate price that these hats are marked at. The prices look almost out of keeping with the surroundings.

Come and see these hats with your own eyes. They will surely make you feel that Autumn is high and that soon the crisp air will bring its message from the frozen north.

Our Millinery Workroom is in charge of a designer for several years in the same capacity with Strawbridge & Clothier, of Philadelphia.

To Lancaster and Return

Another Progressive Movement by Lancaster's Progressive Store

We want you in the future to ride from your home town to Lancaster and back home again as our guests; at our expense. We want you to feel that this store is your store when you come to Lancaster, a store that you may feel thoroughly at home in, just as you would in a friend's house. We want you to use our store courtesies frequently; such as our telephone service, writing table, rest room, etc. To make appointments here with your friends; to roam about our departments, examine the merchandise, ask questions, it matters not in the least whether your intention is to purchase or not.

We Want To Make This The Ideal Store for Out of Town Folks

Our latest proposition is to refund to you IN CASH the cost of your round trip ticket to Lancaster and back; provided the total of your purchases on that one day exceed ten dollars. This applies to every one in the county of Lancaster, no matter how remote they may be from this city.

All you have to do on completion of your purchase is to produce your railroad or car ticket; and your round trip carfare will be paid you by us.

The Week in Grain

Compiled for the Mount Joy Bulletin, at Mount Joy, Pa., by Wm. L. Bear & Co., Pennsylvania Building, Philadelphia, Pa., by D. E. Lehman, Manager, Woolworth Building, Lancaster, Penna.

Phila., Pa., Sept. 9, 1912. The burden of grain moving to primaries has presented a burden that could not be ignored, and prices for the most part have been inclined to weakness. The better demand in cash channels for coarse grains has kept that list relatively firmer than wheat, eastern shippers taking freely of corn with engagements of oats for export on a large scale. Well informed interests estimate the amount of oats already exported as high as ten million bushels, and this cereal has experienced little of the accumulation and hedging sales that has been important elsewhere. By reason of a large speculative short interest and good eastern demand, the nearby delivery of corn has advanced in the face of weakness elsewhere and large interior movement. The crop outlook has improved rapidly and materially. Snow's estimate of Sept. 1 placing the probable yield at more than twenty nine hundred million. While this yield is not clear of frost danger it is making rapid progress to that point, and our own advices indicate a yield much in excess of the amount that seemed possible two months since.

Next week will bring a Government estimate of importance, and there is little doubt that it will indicate a more bountiful crop of cereals than any of its previous estimates. Snow places the combined wheat yield at 728 million and oats in excess of 1400 million, and while the Government will probably show lower than those figures, it will doubtless reflect the extensive improvement crops have experienced during the past month.

Nobody as yet has charged that the Bull Moose is inoculated with the hookworm.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.

CARE OF FOOD:—To prevent the spoiling of food the first requisite is perfect cleanliness in the place of storage. Secure this, not only with soap and water, but with fresh air, dryness, whitewash, sunshine and cold, adapted by common sense. Keep the cellar dry by the unslacked lime placed here and there in large dishes. This lime will take up the moisture until it becomes slacked, then renew the lime. Preserve the slacked lime for use in the garden. Mixed with manure and the rich soil of the garden, slacked lime, properly used, neutralizes the acids in the compost and "sweetens growing things in the hill" tomatoes, melons and corn for an instance. The sweetening is done by the elimination of acid.

Light, ventilation and low temperature will retard the growth of molds. From the standpoint of household sanitation and cold-storage bacteria are the most important of the three micro-organisms here considered. They require at least 25 percent of moisture to thrive, and their capacity for multiplication is marvelous. While they grow best in the high temperature of 80 to 90 degrees, most of them are killed by 150 to 160 degrees of moist heat. The frequent repetition of boiling temperature applied to some bacteria is necessary to kill the spores. Buy only such foods as are in the freshest and best condition. Succulent fruits, raw meat, meat products and particularly milk, are especially subject to the inroads of bacteria and should therefore have never-ceasing attention. Consume them as soon as possible after purchase, or subject them to this treatment: Thoroughly scald or else boil the utensils in which the food it to be placed; the temperature best suited to the keeping of food is usually as near the freezing point as possible. Meats, fish, fowls, and other highly putrescible foods are perfectly kept in cold-storage, for years, and a good ice-box will keep them for the household, several days, when the box is dry and clean.

Food often becomes dangerous before it shows any outward signs of decomposition. The bacteria may, as they feed upon the proteids give off substances known as ptomaines, some of which are verily poisonous to us. It is not known under what conditions these poisons are developed in foods. The safe rule is to eat sparingly, or not at all, of foods that are liable to such changes in hot weather, and especially where the methods of preparations are not known, or where the serving of a large number of persons at the same time, prevents sufficient care in cooking and serving.

SEASONABLE HINTS:—The good old summertime is always welcome, and we now have it with us, with all the pleasant gifts that it brings, also with all the unpleasantness. While we should be thankful for the former, we should guard against the latter, and we can very much with a little care and discretion.

The green and fresh fruits and vegetables of the season are a continuous delight and the farmer and market-gardener, with modern helps and ideas, bring to our tables in all their perfection and at insignificant cost. Less in the business. But nevertheless we appreciate such things when we raise them ourselves, even at a somewhat greater expense.

With these good things from the temptation to over-indulgence in them, comes the most direct drawback. With the added heat and more open air exercise, the consequent increase of appetite and the allurements of fresh melons, fruits and garden-produce, constant care is required to prevent diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus, and other troubles of the bowels, which bring in their train, susceptibility to fevers, nervousness, and many other ills. Hence the motto should always be: Guard well the citadel of health, the stomach.

Grown folks should know and generally do, how to set the guard, but they have a double duty when they have any part of the control of children. The little ones do not know so well about the virtues of avoidance, hence they are the most frequent sufferers from the green fruits, etc., and should be particularly looked after all the time, not only because they are the most liable to injurious influences, but because they are not so able to withstand the attack of cold, cramps, dysentery and all that, as more mature and stronger persons.

CLUB NOTES.

Dear Doctor:—Have suffered off and on for the last week with a severe burning and itching between the fingers and toes, followed by minute round vesicles, in which there is a clear fluid. There is no redness. They dry up soon in a few days, leaving a scale. My doctor does not seem to know quite what it is.

Health Article 2

Am inclined to think the trouble is what is known as Cheiro-Pompholyx, which is quite frequently met with. It is characterized by the formation of little round blisters, usually upon the hands and feet. Persons in ill health or those of a nervous temperament usually are the sufferers. The disease seems to be dependent upon insufficient action of the nerves of the skin.

Oxide of zinc, rubbed up with vaseline and applied every six hours will relieve the itching. The vesicles should not be opened. The nerve action should be increased by appropriate treatment, plenty of fresh air and healthful food supplied, keep your mind cheerful and provide rest.

All readers of this publication are at liberty to write for information at any time pertaining to the subject of health. Address all communications to the Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill., with name and address in full and at least four cents in postage.

Value of Road Maintenance

Proper maintenance of roads is equally as important as good construction; in fact, from the standpoint of preserving a road investment it is much more important. By maintenance is meant not periodic repairs but keeping the road in good condition at all times. If a road is not properly maintained it deteriorates in a geometrical ratio. A small depression fills with water and soon becomes a mud hole; an obstructed side ditch forces the water to run down the centre of the roadway and gullies out the surface. A defect which could be remedied in the beginning with a shovelful of earth in a minute's time; if neglected, may require several wagon loads of earth and a day's time; and in addition is an obstruction to traffic.

Our country roads should be maintained in the same manner as our railroads. The roads should be divided into sections, and an intelligent laborer put in charge of each section, with the understanding that he is to devote his entire time to keeping his section in perfect order, going over it constantly and repairing all defects. Wherever this system has been adopted it has proved more economical than the old system of periodic repairs; and, in addition, has kept the roads in perfect condition nearly the entire time.

A Mennonite Meeting.

The Mennonites held a very interesting Sunday School meeting on Saturday in their church on Front Street, Warwick. Mr. A. B. Lutz of Donegal Springs was moderator and Amos G. Kauffman of East Petersburg was one of the choristers. The morning session opened with devotions and A. B. Lutz made the address of welcome. At the afternoon session excellent addresses were given. Mr. A. B. Lutz spoke on the subject, "Thought Gleaning," and Simon Landis of Elizabethtown used as his subject "Christian Privileges."
