GRIST'S MAIL DELIVERY

Lancaster County's Congressman Tells How Sentiment Was Aroused in Its Behalf

A Washington special dispatch to the Reading Eagle has the follow-ing:
 "Ten or twelve million of people are personally concerned in the crea-tion of the town and village mail de-livery service, authorized in the pos-tal appropriation bill, which has just become a law," was the declaration to-day of Congressman Grist, Lan-caster, who is sponsor for the town mail carrier appropriation carried in the bill.
 The new system will connect the city delivery and rural mail services, he said, "forming a three-linked mail collection and delivery organ-ization covering the whole country, and giving the people of the United States mail facilities second to no other country's postal administra-tion. In Pennsylvania there are no less than 200 post offices of the second and third classes, and in the country at large more than 4,000 offices, whose patrons are now com-pelled to personally visit the post office for their mail, not with stand-ing the fact that such post offices produce material profit to the government."
 Not since the establishment of the rural delivery service about 16 years ago, has Congress approved such an important extension of the letter carrier service of the post office department as that which has just been authorized. Under the new system carrier service will be eventually established in all towns and villages having second or third class post offices, and as there are several thousand such places, it is estimated by postal officials that not less than 10,000,000 of people will be served. Heretofore the city de-livery service has been confined to places having as much as 10,000 population or annual post office re-ceipts amounting to $10,000 or more. Henceforth the government will maintain the city delivery service for the large cities; town or village delivery for the smaller cities and towns; and the rural de-livery in the country districts.
 As in the case with all important legislation, some Congressman must father every new proposition. Early in the 61st Congress, Mr. Grist in-troduced what proved to be the only bill in that Congress providing for mail delivery service in the towns and villages, and his speech advocat-ing the legislation aroused wide public sentiment for congressional action. The interest of President Taft was enlisted and the annual re-ports of the postmaster General and First Assistant Postmaster General strongly recommended that an appropriation be made to inaugurate the new service experimentally.
 Although patrons of post offices in hundreds of the smaller towns have been for years inconvenienced by the lack of facilities for mail de-livery and collection, these people commanded no consideration so long as their efforts to secure relief were unorganized. This condition impressed Congressman Grist, who caused the formation of a commit-tee of prominent business men rep-resenting towns in various States, and over the signature of these pro-gressive and representative business men an appeal for organized wide-awake men was sent broadcast to other wide-awake men at the non-delivery post offices. Congress was soon flooded with petitions, resolutions and letters from citi-zens, councilmanic bodies, boards of trade and chambers of commerce throughout the United States urg-ing the Grist mail delivery bill and the once lone exponent thereupon discovered a host of supporters who favored the legislation. The result was that the measure had been en-acted into statute with far less de-lay than had the Lancaster member not taken the initiative.
