CENTENARY OF THE TROUSER

It Was Napoleon's Victorious Legions Who Brought That Garment Into Fashion.

As nearly as can be ascertained it is a hundred years since Napoleon Bonaparte's soldiers introduced the olden style of leg wear which speedily secured recognition as the distinctive masculine garment of civilians throughout two continents. In 1814—the year before Waterloo—it was related as a current news item of some importance that the great duke of Wellington had been refused admittance to Almack's in London, because he presented himself wearing trousers instead of the conventional breeches which the dress regulations then in vogue demanded. As a matter of historical fact trousers have been worn by various races and by both sexes in all the ages of which any authentic records exist. Generally speaking, trousers were regarded in ancient times as symbolical of inferiority or effeminacy. In the triumphal processions of the Caesars, for example, prisoners of war wore them as a sign of defeat, while the sturdy legs of Roman's victorious legions were bare below the bottom of the skirted or kilned gear of mail. For the last hundred years or thereabout trousers have been widely recognized as the garments of authority, the outward and visible sign of the stronger sex, says the American Tailor and Cutter. But that position has not been won or maintained without a struggle. Many attempts have been made to trample down the tyranny of trousers, as their rule has been called; many times has their superiority been challenged. But so far their position remains secure.

BEER BARRELS IN WARFARE

Used in English Army Maneuvers for the Construction of a Foot Bridge.

"The way they have in the army" of getting across country, despite fire, hail, snow and vapor, was illustrated by a fine piece of handy-man work during field training at Aldershot, England, recently.

The Third Infantry brigade found itself obliged to retire. The enemy were too strong in front. Unfortunately, however, the Basingstoke canal stretched behind them.

This was the chance the Second Essex had been looking for. They commandeered hay from a neighboring stack, lashed it into five-foot square bales, wrapped these in tarpaulin wagon covers, and moored the completed articles like rafts in the water. Planks stretched from one to the other enabled the whole battalion to cross over in single file.

Meanwhile the Second Middlesex, not to be beaten, borrowed half a dozen empty beer barrels from an inn and made a light foot bridge.

The Somerset Light Infantry finding plenty of cut timber in Plyestock wood, made a fairly substantial trestle bridge in less than two hours, across which all the vehicles of the brigade were passed, the battalion following in fours.

The Second Border regiment also constructed a light barrel bridge, and the whole brigade crossed the canal, thanks to their handy men, without mishap, the rear guard destroying the bridges.

Maine's Greatest Crop.

The total sale of the croostock potato crop of 1911 is estimated at between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000 bushels, leaving between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels that were sent to the starch factories, used for seed and food purposes here in the country or lost. It is figured that for crops sold the average price was over $2 a barrel.

This means that Aroostook received for the crop of potatoes which it raised in 1911 between $1,650,000 and $1,800,000. The exceptionally good year has encouraged the farmers, and their plans show that there will be no shrinkage of the acreage this season. It will not be increased, however, to any appreciable extent. Most of the Aroostook farmers believe that the time has come to stop increasing the acreage and to devote themselves to the problem of securing further increase of the yield acre.

PET AVERSION OF THE SAILOR

Stormy Petrel Is Regarded With Disfavor by Even the Most Stout-Hearted Seamen.

There are few persons who have crossed the ocean that have not observed the stormy petrel skimming along the surface of the water. They fit past the vessel like swallows, taking their scanty portion of food from the waves.

Habited in black and making their appearance generally in larger numbers just previous to, or during, a storm, they have long been regarded by the superstitious not only as foreboding messengers, but as agents in some way responsible for bad weather.

Nobody can tell where they come from or where they breed. Sailors assert they hatch the egg under the wing and rear the young on pieces of flotsam. That mysterious origin has given rise to an opinion prevalent among mariners that they are in some way connected with the supernatural agencies of the air.

They are variously known as stormy petrels, witch birds, the devil's birds and Mother Carey's chickens. Their sudden appearance often makes the stoutest hearted seaman flinch.

INSPIRATION OF THE COLORS

Sentiments That the Soldier Associates With the Flag Have Turned Many Battles.

Instance after instance could be quoted from military history in which the mere sight of the colors has inspired men and carried them to ultimate victory when the tide of battle appeared to have turned against them and all seemed lost. Great generals have themselves taken the colors in their hands and rallied their forces to supreme effort in the hour of trial. Obviously it was not the mere piece of tattered silk that wrought these wonders; it was the sentiment inseparably associated with the colors that acted as the spell.

We know, too, that the capture or the loss of colors has always been assigned a vital importance by the world's greatest commanders, because they knew that these regimental emblems typified all that their possessors held most dear—prestige, honor, victory. Let any man visit Napoleon's tomb at the Invalides, and, taking on the solemn spirit of the hour, gaze down into the circular shrine in which lies the huge porphyry sarcophagus containing the body of the great captain whose legions made all Europe tremble. Apart from the sarcophagus itself, what is it that most impresses one out of every ten spectators? Surely the stands of colors—the trophies of war—that stand grouped round the tomb. They are the mutely eloquent witnesses to the greatness of the man whose dust rests in their midst.—London Telegraph.

Suicidal Habit of Butterfly.

Considerable interest attaches to a migration of butterflies to this country from the continent which recently took place, remarks the London Standard. The migration in question consisted chiefly of the pretty "Clouded Yellow" and the well-known "Painted Lady." The extraordinary part of the story is this, that none of either species will ever get through the British winter. All true British butterflies sleep from October to March, either as eggs, caterpillars, pupae or butterflies, but the Painted Lady and Clouded Yellow perish. It has long been suggested that they migrate back again to France, but the necessity of waiting for a north wind and the fact that such a wind in October is invariably too cold casts some doubt upon this theory. The Red Admiral is another victim to suicidal migration.

The Illuminati.

The Illuminati would be called in these days "Rationalists" or "Free-thinkers," or "Liberals." Founded in Spain about 1775, the order or sect or whatever you may choose to call it, spread over all Europe, becoming especially strong in France and Germany. They claimed that truth, and the proofs of it, were internal, to be found in the reason and conscience, rather than in the outer works of things, such as creeds, forms and acts. The rationalism of the Illuminati was, as Matthew Arnold would say, "tinged with emotion," being a combination of rationalism and mysticism. The opposition of the church was strong, and the first of the Illuminati paid the usual penalty of being "unorthodox."

The Daisy Circle of the Church of God held a very successful festival on Saturday evening. A neat sum was realized.

On Sunday night the Epworth League held a rally before a number of visitors who were repaid for their attendance by the spiritual uplift for all present.

Mr. Simon Eby of Hershey is the guest of Levi Shuman, Samuel Eby and other friends in our town. Mr. Eby was a well-known business man of Mt. Joy several years ago and has a brother, Mr. Samuel Eby residing in Mt. Joy at the present time.

Our class rush at Delaware College was rather, rather fierce. One hundred young men at the different ends of a rope each class trying for possession certainly amounts to a fierce struggle. The Sophs won after leaving one Freshman on the field crippled with a sprained ankle.

Sunday morning was the time for the Sunday School rally in the M. E. Church, Salunga, and the rally that was presented to the visitors and friends was certainly a credit to all concerned. Miss Alice Strickler, the superintendent of the school, certainly knows how to get the interest and attention of the children. The school at present numbers some ninety pupils and Sunday School work is progressing in our town.

Save the squirrels! The beautiful grey squirrels on the Capitol Grounds have become so tame that they hop around on the roads in the vicinity and we fear by so doing they are running some risk on account of the hunting season. Mrs. Henry Miller of Rohrerstown was buried in the Mennonite Cemetery at Landisville Tuesday afternoon. The Board of Control of the Landisville Camp Association will hold a meeting on the grounds on Wednesday morning when the building committee consisting of five members namely Mr. Bender of Strasburg, A. It isn't Veneer That Really Counts. It's what a man is, not what he has, which makes him a real man, after all. Acquired powers have their fascination, it must be admitted, but compared with genuine qualities, are not important. Which do you wish—the ability of a husband to swear at you in seven languages, or a loving-tenderness that will prompt your husband to speak words of sympathy to you in commonplace accents? Are you contemplating living with cleverness that can cut you to the heart, or with a great tenderness of nature that can sympathize? Technical facilities, encyclopedic information, polished manners, all acquired points, usually attract a woman. They are veneers, and the wise girl will look beneath. A continental bow, a polite speech of apology with a French phrase thrown in, can never counterbalance the black eye given in a blind rage. Corner on Idols. H. E. Huntington of Pasadena, Cal., has done a foolish reactionary thing. He has bought 57 idols, brought them from their original Japanese temple, and installed them in his grounds so that he can worship Buddha in seclusion. How much better it would have been if he had got statues of some of the American idols and put them up so that the populace might worship. He could have several political favorites, Mammon, two or three baseball heroes, several moving picture cowboys, a ten-foot statue of an American silver dollar, a leading vaudeville actress, an aviator, a fat hog for Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha visitors, and statues of a bull moose, an elephant and a donkey.—Pennsylvania Grit. Preserving Their Morals. When a fuss blew out for the fifth time in five minutes the woman who, with her four small children, occupied the seat nearest the motorman, clamored for assistance in removing her brood to a seat in the rear of the car. "You needn't go to all that trouble, madam," said an old gentleman reassuringly. "There is no danger. You are just as safe here as in any other part of the car." "Oh, I'm not afraid," she said. "I want to get the children away some place where they can't hear the motorman."
