USEFUL INFORMATION FOR THE FARMER

Pigs From Able Bodied Old Sows More in Number and Larger When Farrowed—Early Selection of Seed Corn Essential to Good Crops

Sows should be retained for a number of years until their places can be filled with their equals. It is known that the progeny from mature parents are superior to those descended from young progenitors not fully developed. Boars and sows for breeding should be kept in a good thrifty condition but not fat. The writer has always been troubled to keep his breeding sows from becoming too fat and consequently farrowing a small number of scrawny pigs. I once took a large sow to fatten for one-half the pork. I did not know she was with pig and fed her all the corn meal and wheat middlings she would eat. Imagine my astonishment and vexation when she had three little dwarfed pigs not only smaller than pigs generally are when first farrowed, but emaciated. Sows for breeding should not be allowed to run with the fattening hogs fed on corn but kept in a pasture by themselves and given a plentiful supply of slop made of equal parts of wheat shorts, corn meal and wheat bran. Most young sows will breed when three months old if allowed to run with a boar, but eight or twelve months is as young as is judicious to breed them. The pigs from large bodied, old sows will be more in number and frequently double the size of pigs from young sows when farrowed, and this with the same feed and care and will frequently weigh 50 per cent more at a year old. Not only this, but it stunts or dwarfs the growth of such young things permanently and they never attain good size.

Every good practice has a reason for its being, and according to whether this reason seems sound to those who have occasion to use the practice determines its popularity.

The early selection of seed corn is a good practice, its acceptance is one great step in increasing corn production cannot be over looked. It is not accepted by a great many farmers as essential, owing largely to past experience. They say that their seed has been selected from the crib year after year with good results, so why not now? Yet contrasted to this claim Sam Jordan, the Missouri corn man, says, "There is only one worse way to get seed corn, and that is to get it after night from your neighbor's crib." Now we grant right here that crib selected corn has given good results in the past in the majority of seasons. But we insist that there always have been seasons where its germinability was very low and the next crop, suffered badly. We also grant that crib selected corn will probably grow all right in the majority of future years, with the exception of seasons following heavy fall rains and early frozes. But mere growth is not all that is now demanded of good seed. An animal may grow rapidly and develop into an unsightly, unprofitable beast. So may a stalk of corn grow rapidly and be barren. In the past our fields produced abundantly almost regardless of the quality of seed sown, but now that excess of fertility is gone for ever, and the best of seed is only one step in the production of good crops. Therefore seed corn should be selected early, not only to insure its being thoroughly dried out and properly stored, thus assuring good germination, but also to insure seed of proper percentage as nearly as possible. When you pick out a nice looking ear from the crib, you can never tell whether it was produced by a slim stalk or a stocky one, whether it grew two feet high or ten. But if you pick those seed ears before husking you can choose the stalk too. When the corn is well matured, go through the field, and pick good ears from strong, stocky stalks. These stalks should be eight or nine feet high under Missouri conditions, thick and flat at the base and bearing the ear about four feet from the ground. Such selection breeds remarkably true and will mean much in preventing stalks from blowing down and in ease of husking. The ear itself should always hang down, this to prevent water standing in the husk and spoiling the grain. So much has been said about proper shape of the ear that it is hardly worth while to repeat it here. But remember this, that experiment has proved that long ears are the best producers. Judgment must be exercised, of course. Don't take an ear because it is big, but select your seed as large as will safely mature in your locality. Now it only takes about fourteen good ears to plant an acre. Is it too much trouble to select the few bushels that will be required for next year's crop? Down in southwest Missouri an experiment station man made this test. He secured seed corn out of the planter boxes of about a dozen farmers while they were planting. Each lot of seed was planted, all on the same day, on the same sized plot and on the same kind of ground. It was thinned to the same stand and treated the same through out the growing season. When the corn was husked however, one plot stood out far superior to the rest. The yield was so much better that upon figuring the value of actual corn produced in this case and the average of other plots it was found that all the men in the neighborhood could have paid this man $52 a bushel for seed and made as much money as they did make. Why? He had a good variety and well selected, well cared for seed. They had not.

IN MIDDLETOWN

Statements of Middletown Citizens Are Always of Interest to Our Readers

To many of our readers the streets of Middletown are almost as familiar as those of our own town, and we are naturally interested to read of happenings there. The following report from a well known and respected resident will be helpful to numbers of men and women here in Mount Joy.

C. A. Seltzer, 239 N. Union St., Middletown, Pa., says: "I was led to try Doan's Kidney Pills in view of the satisfactory experience member of my family had with them. My back was very lame and I could hardly turn over in bed. Liniments and plasters did little, if any good. I used Doan's Kidney Pills as directed and they brought prompt and gratifying relief. I have unlimited confidence in this remedy." (Statement given February 11, 1908.)

Lasting Results
At a later date Mr. Seltzer said: "I cannot speak too highly of Doan's Kidney Pills. Kidney trouble has not bothered me during the past two years. It is a pleasure to recommend this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., New York, sole agents for the United States.
