PARK TREES PERILED

Fine Elms in New York Endangered by Caterpillars.

More Spraying is Needed but There is Not Enough City Money to do This Thoroughly, Says Commissioner Storer.

New York.—Visitors to Central park within the last few days, and those who walk along the Fifth avenue side of the park, have been appalled at the destruction done to the fine elm trees by thousands of caterpillars, remarks a writer in the New York Tribune. They are the tussock moths, long known among landscape gardeners as one of the most persistent and destructive insects with which they have to deal. Within the limits of Central park they seem to have sprung into life in unusually large numbers this year. Charles Downing Lay, the landscape architect of the park, said recently that in a recent trip through the parks of Brooklyn and the Bronx he saw comparatively few of them.

E. S. Avery, who lives at the Metropolitan club, and several other lovers of New York's fine trees, have called attention to this unfortunate state of affairs, and have not hesitated to say that unless the deadly moth situation is taken in hand quickly and forcibly Central park and other sections of Manhattan island which possess handsome trees will see many of the best specimens degenerated to decaying stumps before the approach of another spring.

Landscape architects and authorities on trees who were asked yesterday if it were too late in the season to do anything to counteract the destructive effects of these pests said on the contrary that this was the time to get to work. As soon as the caterpillars emerge from their cocoons, which they are now doing by the thousands, they start upward for the green leaves, upon which they feed, and then return to the trunk to lay their eggs within the bark. If the trees are well sprayed with arsenate of lead mixture they will die before denuding the tree partially of the leaves.

"This spraying is the second means of eradicating the moths," said William J. Zartmann yesterday. For ten years he was superintendent of parks in Brooklyn. "My method of fighting the tussock moth has been to have workmen clean off the trunk and branches thoroughly in the winter with wire brushes. The small cocoons are swept out of their hiding places, and, being caught on pieces of canvas under the tree, are then burned. This is a laborious job, for with large trees the men must get up to the top and scrape all the branches and one man cannot do much more than three trees a day.

"The spraying comes when the moths first appear—anywhere from the end of June to the middle of July. If thoroughly applied by power spraying machines to every part of the tree one good spraying ought to be sufficient."

Mr. Zartmann figured out the approximate cost of this work at about $1.30 a tree. The spraying is the most costly. A crew of five men and a modern power spraying machine, he said, ought to clean about sixty trees a day.

"One or two years' work is not enough," added Mr. Zartmann. "It must be faithfully followed out year after year, and then, while we cannot prevent the appearance of these insects entirely, they will be less in number and less destructive to the future beauty of the trees."

Park Commissioner Storer, when asked what was being done to kill off the moths and prevent their future propagation, said that he believed everything that could be done with the means at hand was being accomplished, and he added that spraying machines were at work in several parts of the park.

Besides the caterpillars the remaining elms show indications of other diseases noticeable by the dead branches protruding in a most unpleasing way from the sides and tops.

GIRL RESISTS HEAVY BOLT

Young Woman Unconscious Several Days, but Lives After Shock That Melted Steel.

Baltimore, Md.—Medical scientists are interested in the peculiar case of Josephine Jones, sixteen years old, who is slowly recovering at St. Agnes' hospital from a lightning stroke. Dr. Pierce Wilson says that one of the most interesting features of the case is the fact that for several days following the accident the girl was in a state of anesthesia caused by the terrific shock on the nervous system.

"For some days she was insensible to pain. There was no muscular paralysis, but the nervous system was numbed. On making an investigation I found that the depression made in the sidewalk where she was struck measured two feet in diameter and fifteen inches in depth. A tremendous impact caused the sinking of the earth. While in Europe, several years ago, I searched for unusual electrical cases, but this one is the most marvelous I have ever known. The body resistance of the young woman is what saved her life.

"The bolt melted her necklace and the steel rod of the umbrella she was carrying. The girl was burned the entire length of her left side, the wounds have not healed and may require a skin grafting operation."

PAYS TRIBUTE TO BRONCO

Writer Glowingly Points Out Usefulness of Little Arizona Animal on the Trail.

When the Arizona bronco wishes to be safe for you and himself, he is the safest thing in the world; and when he wishes to be unsafe, life is a merry chance. I went up and down trails in Arizona which were almost perpendicular, and rough and stone-strewed; but there was little danger, for the bronco has, not the "ten pound," but the "thousand pound" look! His nose is to the ground, his eyes fastened on the trail, his feet set before another ease, preserves the balance, adjusts the weight for another; and all this wonderful machinery of equiptise, stability and safety you feel working under you like a delicate machine. Yet this sage pioneer of the trail with his meticulous care of you and himself, was just a wild range-pony, hunted down by a range rider, driven, coaxed or duped into a corral, broken, saddled, bridled and ridden all in one hour; wrenched out of his wildness, having his heart broken, and made into a slave while you would eat your breakfast. He is not a beauty; he is just a mongrel; but his legs and his feet are made of iron and steel, and the work he does over awful trails, in a rough and ragged country, strewn with stones and flints and boulders and lava and scrub, week after week, month after month and year after year, would spoil the legs of a thoroughbred in three days. —Gilbert Parker in Metropolitan Magazine.

KING OF ALL THE TUBERS

Compared With the Yam, Irish Potato is Called Insignificant, Almost Tasteless Bulb.

The golden yam, says the Washington Post, that elaborates the sun and the soil into a snar which makes saccharine seem sour, was set apart by our first parents as the overlord of all tubers. The history of its Irish rival may be definitely traced to the foster care of Raleigh. It spread into Lancashire, its path through the low countries may be followed as clearly as the march of the army worm. But the genealogy of the yam is lost in the mists of antiquity. It is supposed to be identical with the Chinese tuber for which the Orient peoples dug as for hidden treasure. Beyond all peradventure it was the yam to which the Spanish gave what afterward became the generic name "batata," modified into our own collective "potato." Its purple flowers were hailed as the harbingers of nature's richest largesse, while Humboldt was still doubting whether nature originally had anything to do with the creation of the Irish potato. It is the succulent root to which loving allusions are made by the great dramatist, who would have condemned the Mermaid as a tavern if he had been offered the tasteless bulb exploited by Master Raleigh.
