

There must be a reason for this. Do you suppose that good sensible people are going to throw money away? We have had to convince them that we could give them More Heat for their money than they could get any where else.

We are ready to convince you too. Will you let us?

POULTRY

VALUE OF POULTRY PRODUCTS
Poor Methods of Preparing and Marketing Deprive Poultryman of Much of His Profits.

(By F. H. STONEBURN.)
Poultry products of various kinds form one of the greatest crops produced upon American farms. The ever increasing number of farms and plants devoted exclusively to poultry keeping produce large amounts of high grade goods, although these are inconsiderable when compared with the vast supply coming from the small flocks scattered upon the farms and in the villages throughout the country. Unquestionably the great bulk of poultry products has come in the past from the latter sources, and this condition is likely to continue.

Many farmers concede that their flocks of poultry yield them a fair profit, although an intelligent observer has but to spend a short time in investigating the great markets to learn that poor methods of preparing and marketing alone prevent the producer from receiving much greater returns. The majority of poultry raisers fail to realize that their profits could be largely increased, first, by the production of better and more uniform goods; and second, by improved methods of disposing of them.

Not infrequently it is stated that high-grade goods sell themselves, and in a sense this is true, but it is not enough to turn out superior goods; much is lost if they are not marketed in the most careful manner. The poultry man who receives the highest quotations for his products throughout the year is the one who studies "how, when and where" to market. He learns that during certain months in each year there is a shortage in different kinds of poultry products, and he plans to produce as large a quantity as possible of these products during the season of scant supply. He then ascertains in which markets he can dispose of these goods to best advantage, and prepares and packs them according to the requirements of those markets.

Poultry products are concentrated and valuable, although not extremely perishable. Therefore, improved means of transportation make it possible for the poultryman to place his goods in the best markets without greatly increased expense.

Different Styles of Egg Cases.

Feed During Molting.
The molting of fowls is a natural process and not a disease and no medical treatment is necessary or desirable. Feed molting fowls just as you would feed them at any other time, only remember that molting is done during hot weather, and less carbonaceous food should be given than when the weather is cool. Oats, wheat, cut clover or alfalfa or any leguminous seeds may be used more because the weather is warm than that which fowls are molting. Any sort of green food is good; so are beets, turnips, bulbs or tubers of any sort that they will eat. They should have little corn or other heat-producing food.

Sow turkeys for poultry food.
This is the month to wage war on lice. Almost all varieties of geese make good mothers. Dry bran makes a good chicken feed the year round. There should be shade provided in every poultry yard. Feed sweet milk occasionally during the summer months. Overfeeding is a common cause of loss among turkeys. A turkey cannot grind its food without having sharp grit. Oats are the best feed for growing boys and large frames. Summer eggs that go to market must be above suspicion. Geese live long, but it is not wise to keep ganders over four years old. Geese have been bred for table use at least since the days of ancient Egypt. A turkey when a few weeks old grows very fast and has a voracious appetite. If you want large, healthy chicks, don't crowd more than twenty-five in one coop. Yard the young stock during the day and house at night to stop summer losses. Do not get the idea that there is no money in poultry unless you raise poultry on a large scale. Feed for growing pullets and cockerels should consist largely of cracked oats with the hull removed. Select a warm place away from the windows for roosts, and have an inclined platform under them to catch the droppings.

POULTRY NOTES

There is no case of INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, BLOOD OR SKIN DISEASE arising from a disordered stomach, bowels, liver or kidneys which "SEVEN BARKS" will not materially benefit, or permanently cure; this has been proven for the past 42 years. Ask your parents, or neighbors, about SEVEN BARKS, as thousands have testified to its merits. Don't delay to get a 50 cent bottle at your drugist, and start yourself on the road to complete recovery. OVER AT IRONVILLE

The Democrats Held a Big Jollification There Thursday Night
The Democrats of Ironville and vicinity held a monster jollification parade on Thursday evening. Matthias Helfrich was the chief marshal and music was furnished by the Ironville band. Roman candles and red fire illuminated the line of march. The parade went to Cordelia and up the road past the church and thence to Silver Spring by the ore banks. The column counter marched at the toll gate and then marched up the pike to the school house and thence to Lynch's hotel where they counter-marched again. The column was formed of 65 riders, many of them cowboys, floats and salt river boats and was over a mile long. It was the biggest parade ever held in Ironville.

MAYTOWN

Charles Harter, of Leola, has returned home after a visit with his parents. The funeral of Mrs. William Brosey was a very largely attended one. Rev. E. E. Kaufman of the Church of God was the officiating clergyman. Interment was made at Mt. Joy. W. E. Wineka, who conducted the butchering business here for some time, will discontinue and remove to Philadelphia. He will have sale of his personal property on Tuesday next. The Democratic parade held in this place was very large. The Maytown band furnished music for the occasion, and gave a concert in Centre Square. There were plenty of red lights, and the houses along the route were illuminated.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, after years of backache suffering, days of misery, nights of unrest, the distress of urinary troubles, when she finds freedom. Many readers will profit by the following.
Mrs. Henry Kroll, Mt. Joy St., Mt. Joy, Pa., says:
"My kidneys were disordered and my health became badly run down. I had a constant backache and was subject to chills and dizzy spells. At times I was hardly able to stand and I found my housework a burden. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Garber's Drug Store. This remedy did me a world of good and since using it I have felt better in every way. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a most efficient preparation for kidney disorders."
