MAKING FARM

THERE are more reasons than one for making poultry a prominent part of the farm program. With 300 to 500 chickens on a place many tons of compost can be made, which will be worth hundreds of dollars in fertilizing the garden and field crops.

It is necessary to keep a poultry house and yard liberally supplied with road dust or some other light soil. The floor under the roosts should have a fresh supply of this earth twice a week or oftener. It serves as an absorbent for the droppings, produces a rich compost very fast and destroys lice.

As a dust heap is one of the first essentials around a poultry plant this clean, fine earth comes into play there also. Dust which chickens use for their baths does not need to be changed more frequently than two or three times in a season. When it becomes dirty it should become part of the compost.

This fertilizer is valuable enough so that it ought to receive some care, and with several hundred chickens the annual accumulation will fill a good sized shed. It needs to be plowed in liberally every season, being of special value in the production of flowers, vegetables and small fruit. During the months when it is accumulating it should be tightly covered in a shed or pit to prevent the loss of nitrogen.

When the roosting platforms or the floors of a poultry house are cleaned, for every 100 pounds of dirt and manure thrown into the compost heap add ten pounds of salts of potassium and ten pounds of sawdust. If the lat-

Plan a system of crop rotation that will build up your soil and produce larger crops and allow a wider margin for profit.

WHEN DRAINAGE PAID.

Brought 450 Bushels of Corn and Added $1,000 to Land's Value.

Four hundred and fifty bushels of corn from eight acres that were almost worthless two years ago is the yield received this year. Drainage did it. Here is the story:

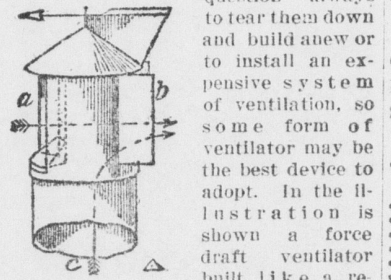

Mr. Van Burskirk wrote two years ago to H. B. Walker, state drainage and irrigation engineer, asking what he should do with an eight acre piece of swampy land covered with willows. This land never had produced anything.

Mr. Walker advised him to drain the land, and he did. The land was planted to corn and yielded 450 bushels. Other corn in that neighborhood averaged from ten to forty bushels to the acre. The cost of draining the land was $125.

Mr. Van Burskirk values his corn at 50 cents a bushel, or $225. Besides the increased crop, he considers his land worth $1,000 more by the improvement. —Kansas Industrialist.

Poultry House Ventilator.

Poultry houses are often unsatisfactory solely because they are badly ventilated. Of course it is out of the question always to tear them down and build anew or to install an expensive system of ventilation, so some form of ventilator may be the best device to adopt. In the illustration is shown a force draft ventilator built like a revolving chimney top. The wing with the arrow on top turns the top so the opening always faces the wind. Some of the wind passes through this opening and out of the top at b. It thus creates a draft up the flue c and thus ventilates the poultry house below. —American Agriculturist.

Here's a Good Combination. In this hunt for the profit dollar keep an eye on the combination of ensilage and clover or alfalfa hay. There is no other combination of feed like it for results in milk. A farmer could make these two pieces of forage and with good cows and no grain he could come out at the end of the year with a fair profit. Of course a few pounds of grain feed a day is a good investment. —Hoard's Dairyman.

Plant Many Trees.

In an article in the Woman's Home Companion on "The Friendly Summer Trees" the author, Frank A. Waugh, professor of horticulture in the Agricultural College of Massachusetts, lays down the general rule that only one tree out of every twenty planted ever grows to maturity. He therefore advises those who plant trees to plant liberally.

Roof or No Roof on Silo?

So far as the silage is concerned, no roof is needed on the silo. Rain and snow do not hurt the silage. For the convenience and comfort of the person removing the silage from the silo it is better to have a roof. —Hoard's Dairyman.

Generous.

A lovely woman who lives on Roxford road is the proud mother of two boys, the older only six years. Mamma is subject to headaches, and mamma has discovered the sort of proprietary pills that will relieve them. One mustn't take more than one per hour.

And the other afternoon mamma had a headache, took a pill and got up to repeat the dose and found the pill box empty. She summoned the maid, "Frida!" she cried, "Did Frida swallow all those pills? Answer me!" "No'm," answered Frida, with a smile, "Don't be scared none. He's a chensorous kid—he gafe half 'em to der baby!"—Argonaut.

Barely Remembered.

"I suppose your late uncle didn't fail to remember you in his will," said the sympathetic friend. "You can hardly call it a remembrance," replied the poor relation, "was more like a faint recollection."
