Too True

"I am not much of a mathematician," said the cigarette, "but I can add to a man's nervous trouble. I can subtract from his physical energy. I can multiply his aches and pains. I can divide his mental powers. I can take interest from his work, and can discount his chances for success."

USEFUL INFORMATION FOR THE FARMER

The Possibilities of Onion Culture, the Cost Per Acre of Raising Them, Financial Returns Per Acre and Number of Acres For One Man

The onion probably offers greater possibilities in the matter of a large yield per acre than does any other crop. It also stands among the foremost in the matter of cost per acre to produce a crop. Therefore, the onion should only be planted where soil and climatic conditions are adapted to its requirements, if gratifying financial returns are to be forthcoming.

Although the onion will grow on almost any kind of soil, experimenters have shown that the sandy loam soils of the mesas and the loamy bottom land soils are best suited to its successful growth. The soil should be especially prepared in advance for a crop of onions, in order that the amount of labor (nearly all of which is done by hand) may be reduced to the minimum. Some such crop as cabbage, potatoes or beets—some hood crop—should be grown on the soil just prior to planting onions, as this will be found to leave the soil in a condition suitable for onion culture. After one of these crops is removed, the soil should be well fertilized. From 20 to 25 tons per acre of stable manure in an advanced stage of decomposition should be used for this purpose. Then the ground should be fall plowed. The winter frost will then slake the soil and make of it an excellent seed bed. The seed may be sown earlier in the spring on that which is plowed in spring, and thus an early start may be had in the work, of which there will be plenty to do.

should be sown, in drills from 10 to 16 inches apart. Thorough harrowing and floating to level the ground well should precede the sowing. When the soil has been leveled and prepared, a marker, which is drawn by hand, is used. This may have three or four legs, and it should be made to mark about 26 inches apart. A small hand plow follows these marks, where irrigation is necessary to make furrows for the irrigation. Then two rows of seed are sown in each space between furrows with a small garden drill. The seed should be sown one-half inch deep, using about four (not less than three and a half) pounds of seed to the acre. If plenty of rain does not follow seeding the ground should be kept moist by irrigation. Plenty of moisture should be provided until the tops begin to fall, usually some time in August, when the onions are practically mature. Many of the most successful onion growers cultivate once a week from the time the plants come through the surface of the ground until the tops begin to fall, when irrigation is stopped. Some use a hand cultivator for this work; others use a wheel hoe. The cultivation should never be deep, as the onion is a shallow feeder. From one to two inches is considered the most practical depth for cultivation. In the mean time, about three careful hand-weedings are necessary, unless the soil is particularly free from weeds. If the plants appear to be bunched in places, a very little thinning may be done, altho no general process of thinning has yet come into practice. The cost of growing onions has been estimated at from $100 to $150 per acre, the growers varying considerably in their estimates. At first thought, this seems enormous but when the fact is considered that the yield on soils that are adapted to the growth of the onion are from 250 to 400 two-bushel sacks to the

One man can only hope to care for from six to eight acres of onion crop during a season.

ACT QUICKLY

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Mount Joy.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in time of danger. In time of kidney danger Doan's Kidney Pills are most effective. Plenty of evidence of their worth. Mrs. F. Conrad, David St., Mt. Joy, Pa., says: "I suffered intensely from kidney trouble and it would be hard to describe the misery I endured. There was a constant, dull pain across my back that made my housework a burden and I was annoyed by chills and dizzy spells. The least work tired me and I always felt languid. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I decided to give them a trial and procured a box at Garber's Drug Store. The first few doses helped me and I grew better rapidly as I continued their use. I am today in better health than I have been for a long time, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given Oct. 26, 1907.)

Mrs. Conrad was interviewed again and she said: "I am glad of an opportunity to re-endorse Doan's Kidney Pills. My health has been of the best since I took this remedy two years ago."
