Foreigner Murdered Tragedy Occurred Late Monday Night in a Shack

THREE MEN ENGAGE IN A FRAZ AS WITH CLUBS AND KNIVES One Man Now in Columbia Hospital Badly Cut and Bruised—Alleged Culprit Was Taken to Jail—Inquest Was to be Held Last Evening

During Monday night another murder was added to the long list which has been recorded in this county during the past fifteen years. In a fight between foreigners one severed the jugular vein of his victim, which allowed him to bleed to death. The fatal quarrel occurred in a shanty of the stone quarries at Billmyer, near Bainebridge. The quarries are operated by the John E. Baker Lime and Stone Company. The man who was killed, Sam Corsocki, the murderer, was landed in the county jail yesterday morning and he will be heard by Justice I. Oliver Fry, of Bainebridge, for murder. The name of the dead man could not be ascertained.

The scene of the murder is nearly two miles east of Bainebridge, on the Susquehanna river. The quarries are extensively operated by the Baker company and a very large number of men are employed. The men who work there include representatives of many nations, as well as a large number of colored men from the South. Among the employees are a lot of slaves, many of whom play by themselves. It was in their shanty that the murder occurred. None of the men can speak English so that it was difficult to get the full particulars as to how the killing occurred. The foreigner was known by numbers, and the murderer's is No. 153.

The fight was the result of a drunken spree and three men were engaged in it. There was a liberal supply of whisky in camp and the men partook of it very freely during the day. There were eighteen men in the shanty while the fight was in progress, but most of them slept through it and could tell very little about it.

The man who lost his life had been working on night turn. He did not feel good on account of drinking and about 10:30 on Monday night he gave another man fifty cents to play an hour for him while he went to the shanty. Upon arriving there he began drinking and soon was drunk. He had a quarrel with Corsocki, who went to the second floor with a friend. The man now dead followed them upstairs and in a room as dark as midnight a desperate fight occurred. The man who lost his life had a club which he began using on the other two. Corsocki drew a large knife, but in the darkness he did not know one man from the other. By mistake he cut his friend, inflicting a wound ten inches long in his hip. He then caught hold of the man with the club and the two had a terrible struggle. They fought all over the room and finally got to the doorway. Corsocki retained a firm hold upon his knife and in the struggle he stabbed the other man, cutting a gash two inches long in his throat. The wounded foreigner staggered down the stairs and through the kitchen. As he was going through the door he fell from the second floor and landed on the ground outside, where he lay until his death occurred in about ten minutes. He bled to death and so frightened were his fellow countrymen that none of them touched him. They gave the man a blanket and had been attending him and a physician attend him. Early yesterday morning he was taken to the Columbia Hospital.

At the time of the stabbing Corsocki was drunk and he made no attempt to escape and later in the night he was secured by a colored man, William Lewis, who detained him until the arrival of Constable W. P. Collins, of Bainebridge, who took him under arrest about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A warrant was sworn out before Justice Fry. As there is no thorough lockup the officer had to sit up with his prisoner the rest of the night at the office of the quarry company. He arrived in Lancaster with his prisoner, whose clothing was clothed with his victim's blood, on the 8:55 train. Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday morning. Corsocki appeared quite unconcerned about the crime and his arrest and coolly smoked a cigarette while a crowd gathered in the station to see him. The man in the Columbia Hospital is a Russian and has given his name as James Vougash. His injuries consist of lacerations of the head and legs and the wounds indicate that he had been slashed with a knife. He is also suffering from bruises on his body, but there are no bones broken and his condition is not regarded as serious.

It Certainly Needs it

DOVES OR PLOVER PROTECTED New Law Also Puts Blackbirds and Killdeer on Protected List

On Saturday Governor Tenor signed the bill enacting into a law a prohibition to shoot turtle dove, plover, blackbirds or killdeer. The penalty for a violation of the law is ten dollars for each bird killed. The law contains a proviso that blackbirds may be killed by owners of property whereon they may be caught destroying eggs or young of other birds, and grain, fruit or berries.

Late summer reports reached the Game Department at Harrisburg that the dove was fast disappearing, and Dr. Kalkbuss, the secretary, made extensive inquiries relative to the truth of these reports and found they were substantiated; that the dove was fast disappearing, but that it was not being killed off by the gunners. It is the general expectation of sportsmen that fewer doves were killed after these birds were put on the game list than before they had any protection. Previous to that period the uncertainty as to whether the dove was or was not protected by law restricted the number of gunners. After the bird was made legal game it seemed almost every one who could muster a gun was after the birds, killing few but scattering the others so badly that it is believed they were frightened away. Mr. Karl Steward of Harrisburg, an ardent sportsman went so far as to declare the dove had practically left that section of the country. Similar reports from other sections of the State decided the Game Commission to put the dove on the protected list with the hope that if the incessant bombardment to which it was subjected caused their departure, that being free from molestation it may return; or if its almost general disappearance was caused by the hunter, the cessation of the slaughter will give the birds a chance to live and multiply. Again it is recognized that the dove is one of the best friends of the farmer, for it feeds almost exclusively on weeds and grasses, and eats thousands of them every day. The plover, also once plentiful, have become very scarce and the number of hunters who will be affected by putting these birds on the protected list will be few.

Built a Motor Boat
Messrs. E. B. Stettin and Norman Henry of this place, have the distinction of building the first motor boat that ever plied the Little Choptank creek in the vicinity of Mount Joy. They have been working on this new venture for a long time and some time ago they launched the boat. It was constructed with propellers on each side but did not prove satisfactory. After a trout they decided to rebuild it. At this time they were subject to ridicule by some of the sportsmen, but who laughs last, laughs best? They placed the propeller in the rear. On Monday she was again launched and carried four passengers from the bridge near the creamery to the Black Springs and return, running like a top. The boat is sixteen feet long and its motive power is furnished with a 1-12 horsepower gasoline engine.

The young men will now put on the finishing touches, a coat of paint and will get an unlimited amount of pleasure from that source the coming summer.

Next Sunday's Services

Minimum Wage Bill
The administration made by Lieutenant Barratt O'Hara, of the Illinois vice investigating commission, that it would be suicidal for one State to adopt a minimum wage bill unless all States adopted the same minimum has caused a good deal of discussion in the Capitol.
When the Illinois commission visited Governor Tenor on its way to Washington last Saturday, Mr. O'Hara said:

"You can understand, Governor, that to have Illinois merchants and manufacturers paying higher wages than were paid in competing States in similar trades would put our people out of business."
Many legislators who, like the Governor, favor a minimum wage bill as an abstract proposition have been seriously disturbed by this confession that the bill now pending in the Legislature contains a possible drawback which may fall heavy upon those to whom the measure is designed to serve.

It has been pointed out, that comparatively few of the States have expressed any interest in minimum wage legislation as yet and that in several of those where it was adopted, it has been thrown out as unconstitutional.
There is said to be a strong and increasing sentiment among the lawmakers here against jeopardizing the interests of the most important manufacturing State in the Union by plunging heedlessly into drastic legislation of this kind without waiting to find out what other States are going to do.

Auto Strikes Team
An accident occurred on the pike between here and Rheems Monday. Mr. Eli H. Engle of this place was driving along when Mr. T. J.
