"Castle" Hats Which We Purchased at Less Than Half Price

The firm of Castle & Co. located in one of the dizzy upper floors of a tall Broadway Skyscraper have been for many years almost the wizards of the Millinery world of America.

Their leadership of fashion in woman's head gear was as solid, undisputed and deserved as that of the late J. P. Morgan in Wall Street finance.

"Castle" hats have a style and an elegance all their own which the most skillful operators cannot copy and no Millinery sale in 5th avenue is complete without the "Castle" line.

Their big establishment, large and imposing as it is, has been outgrown by their enormous and constantly increasing patronage and they are moving their gigantic plant to 33th and 5th avenue.

They decided however that they would not move their stock and they have sold it to us and some other of their regular customers at less than 50c on the dollar.

To attempt to describe or eulogise "Castle" Hats would be like "painting the lily"—enough in beauty, elegance, style and radiance, they have few equals and no superiors in America.

In addition to this most unusual attraction we bought from Phila's greatest importer, nearly one hundred dozen of the newest, best and latest shapes in chips, Milans and Hems. This big institution had more merchandise they ought to have at this time of the year and took a big loss rather than have it left over on their hands

Maytown's Commencement

EXERCISES WERE LARGELY ATTENDED

A Class of Nineteen, the Largest in History of This School Graduated—Hall Was Tastily Decorated for the Occasion

The commencement exercises of the Central High School of Maytown, one of the first of the township High Schools to be established in Lancaster county, were held on Thursday evening in the town Band Hall.

The exercises were opened with the invocation by Rev. G. Arthur Fry, and after the High School had rendered two selections, Miss Edna Shank gave the salutatory address.

The Salutatory

Miss Shank had as her subject, "Honor Awaits at Labor's Gate," and she spoke as follows, after welcoming the audience to the exercises:

Labor was truly said by the ancients to be the price which the gods set upon everything worth having. In olden times the difficulties of study were far greater than now. Books were expensive and cumbersome, oftentimes chained to desks on which they were kept. Anyone who wanted only a meagre knowledge of books had to labor long and earnestly to obtain it. Now everyone is allowed the privilege of obtaining knowledge by the free educational system. And yet the privilege is oftentimes abused. Students forget that they should labor long over difficult studies, and for this reason many do not win honor which they expect. This is true in the business as well as the educational world.

A youth is said to be the child of good fortune who is born to wealth and leisure, freed from all necessity of labor. On the other hand, men look with pity on the youth who early in life is thrown upon his own resources. But let this youth of wealth and leisure be suddenly thrust into the business world, surrounded by many influential men. Why does he not succeed? Why does he not win honor and distinction? Because he did not start at the bottom, and did not labor long and earnestly, did not climb the ladder of fortune rung by rung, but gained his position without any labor on his part, and therefore was not qualified to fill it. But let the conditions be reversed. Take a youth who was thrown upon his own resources and started as a clerk in a large business house, but soon by his faithful services was promoted until finally he became a member of the firm. Is not this youth able to succeed? He will succeed because he has been trained in the school of labor.

In the secular world, why do the names of Lincoln and Livingstone stand forth? Lincoln carried the burdens of the nation through the Civil War, and Livingstone spent the greater part of his life ministering to the needs of the people of dark Africa. These men spent no time in idleness, labored long, earning the reward of true men. In the religious world, just consider the labors of the Apostles Peter and Paul, and yet they considered their greatest labors small in comparison to the honor that would be theirs in winning salvation. Think how long the reformer Luther must have labored over his theses, and when they were completed and given to the world how was he rewarded? Simply by being ordered to appear before the Pope and Emperor and told to retract all he had said and written. But Luther was not the kind of man to take back what he knew to be right and to live a falsehood. To his heroic labors the world is greatly indebted.

Following a recitation by Miss

Anna Gish, Ezra Garber gave the mantle oration, the mantle being received by John L. Garber for the class of 1914. Miss Louisa Clepper followed with an essay on "Civic Pride" and the High School oration was given by Clayton S. Farmer on the subject "The Mission of the Scholars." Louisa Clepper and Edna Frank rendered a duet "See the Pale Face Moon" and Mary Heisey gave a recitation.

The Valedictory

The next number on the program was the valedictory, delivered by Isabel Endsow, who had as her subject, "Life's Enigma," speaking as follows:

Marvelous, indeed, are the achievements of modern science and philosophy. The inventions of an Edison, the philosophy of a Bergson, the financial genius of a Morgan—all these add to the glorious triumphs of the present age. We fly through the air like birds, we swim beneath the surface of the sea like fishes, we send our messages without regard to space, our palace cars take us across the continent at a rate hitherto undreamed of. The ideal of the poet is being actualized, the dream of the philosopher is being realized, the conceptions of the captains of industry are being materialized, the wisdom of the ages is open to the eyes of the humblest child. Yes, truly, the achievements of modern art, science and philosophy are marvelous beyond the dream of the ancient sages.

Yet, in spite of modern achievements, there is still a large element of the mysterious in life. The innocence of childhood, the strength born of struggle, trial and temptation, the transforming power of thought, the influence of an ideal, these are a few of the mighty, mysterious forces which influence and shape our destinies. They are elements of life's enigmas. Innocent childhood thinks little of the great future before it. It sees only today's happenings. Tomorrow is as far away as next year. In youth, there are many trials and temptations to overcome, but in conquering them we come nearer to solving life's problems. Often the vital part of one's character is formed by the surrounding influences. The young folks are more sensitive to surrounding influences than grown-up people are. Hence a well-balanced life requires good environment in youth. Although we must follow chosen ideals at all times, we are not disturbed by passing occurrences. Thus our characters are strengthened and we are aided in the partial solution of our life's difficulties. As we go on toward the attainment of our life's ideal, day by day we learn the truth of the poet's words when he said:

Over and over again,
No matter which way I turn,
I always find in the book of life
Some lesson that I must learn.
I must take my turn at the mill,
I must grind out the golden grain,
I must work at my task with resolute will.
Over and over again.

The time has now come when we must leave this dear old Maytown High School and set out in the commencement of our life's duties. But although we will be absent in body, our deepest interest and kindest regards will ever remain with our old alma mater. You, schoolmates, have been our kind associates during the time spent here. We have spent many happy and never-to-be-forgotten days with you. And it is with the deepest regret that we must at last bid you a sad farewell.

Kind Board of Directors, it is by your aid that we have been able to follow our course to the end. You have ever been willing to supply the means necessary to our advancement. You have done your best to promote our interests and to smooth our pathways, and now, in behalf of the class of 1913, I bid you sincere farewell. Faithful teachers, you have been to us that which no one else could have been. You have assisted us in our school work, you have encouraged us when we so needed it, you have shared with us alike our every joy and sorrow. And the dear, happy days spent under your leadership for the last four years, are indelibly stamped upon our memories as the pleasantest and most joyful days of our lives. And now, as our last token of respect and thankfulness for your kindness and your labors with us, we bid you a kind farewell.

Presentation of Diplomas

The presentation of diplomas was next in order and they were presented to the class by Prof. J. S. Simons, principal of the school, who in a few well-chosen words told the graduates that he hoped they would all strive to gain still greater knowledge than they were able to get at Maytown. After singing by the High School, the exercises were brought to a close, which was voted by everyone to be the most successful ever held at Maytown.

The Graduates

Following are the names of the graduates: Edna P. Frank, Marie C. Harter, Louisa E. Clepper, Emily A. Roath, Anna L. Gish, Mary E. Shank, Marie B. Fletcher, Mary M. Heisey, Leroy N. Mummia, Edna M. Shank, Ezra R. Garber, Charles M. Houseal, Claude B. Henderson, Henry R. Fby, Mary L. Rutt, Jane E. Boll, Clayton S. Farmer and Minnie C. Wjmer.

The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. H. M. J. Klein of Franklin and Marshall College.

Unearthed a Coffin While Planting an Electric Light Pole

John Tome of this place employed by M. R. Hoffman, is nursing a very sore left leg. He had taken a mule to the blacksmith shop to have him shoe, when the mule fell and in assisting the animal he was kicked between the knee and ankle, and is now walking on crutches.

Paul Sload, a young plasterer, of this place had a narrow escape from death the other night. He had partaken of refreshments before he retired, and among them was brick cheese. About midnight he was taken violently ill and an effort was made to secure a physician, but without avail. Home remedies were given, and this somewhat relieved the young man, until Dr. H. A. Mowery of Marietta, could respond. He would have died from ptomaine poisoning had not the home remedies taken effect. He is again able to be about.

The work of the Edison Electric Company in putting the new lighting system through Marietta and vicinity is rapidly progressing. During the construction of the line there were a number of incidents that are worthy of mention. While the pole gang was digging on the Colebrook road, about a half mile from Marietta a grave was unearthed and for a time caused some excitement, as the men thought some one had been murdered. Edward Hammond, with his bar, struck the walnut coffin, piercing it, and then several bones were dug out. Upon examination the coffin was found to be in good condition, and as far as possible the bones were pulled from the hole. It was latter learned that years ago there was a cemetery at this point.

EH Wants His Money

Suits have been entered by E. L. Nissley against E. H. Gish and A. B. Demmy. All three gentlemen were endorsers on a $2,000 note given by the Elizabethtown and Marietta Electric Light Company and discounted at the Union National Bank Mount Joy. Mr. Nissley paid the note and he now sues the other endorsers for their share of the liability.

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Nervousness Caused by Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."—Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

"Doctor's Daughter Took It."

St. Cloud, Minn.—"I was so run down by overwork and worry that I could not stand it to have my children talk aloud or walk heavy on the floor. One of my friends said, 'Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I know a doctor's daughter here in town who takes it and she would not take it if it were not good.'

"I sent for the Compound at once and kept on taking it until I was all right."—Mrs. BERTHA M. QUICKSTART, 727 5th Avenue, S., St. Cloud, Minn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be relied upon as the most efficient remedy for female ills. Why don't you try it?
