FOR POULTRY RAISERS

Of Interest to Farmers and Others Engaged in Raising Poultry. The American Poultry Association has started work on a publication called "The American Standard of Poultry and Eggs." This is made for the use of all those who raise poultry, but it is especially valuable to farmers. To get a copy, write to the Secretary, American Poultry Association, 1000 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. The following questions to be answered by every one interested should be sent to the Secretary of the Association at Mansfield, Ohio. Questions follow:

Tell us about the greatest difficulties you have to meet with in raising your poultry and eggs. Tell us so far as you know what the greatest loss occurs—whether in the most disappointments.

Do you keep pure-bred poultry of any variety, and do you try to sell them at market? If so, what size and shape? Do you keep your eggs while they are fresh for market? What do you do with the surplus products do you store?

Do you often do you market your poultry especially in hot weather? Do you have any special market? Do you have any special market? Do you have any special market?

Do you know how to grade your poultry? Do you know how to grade your poultry? Do you know how to grade your poultry?

People living on a rural route should see that their boxes are substantially fastened to a post set solidly in the ground, at a point convenient for the carrier to drive up to in all conditions of the weather. It has been very noticeable to us when we have had occasion to drive over rural routes that the boxes are not kept up in the condition required by the government. Uncle recently sent out an order to postmasters where there is a rural route, an order to paint the boxes white and place the names on in black letters not under two inches high. If this order were complied with by all the routes it would be a great improvement to the owners as well as to the community and postoffice.
