WHY MOUNT JOY MERCHANTS SHOULD ADVERTISE IN THE BULLETIN

Let's See, What Was His Name?
 In 1908 we experienced a very lively contest for the Presidency and Vice Presidency.
 No great discovery or catastrophe received more space in the public print than did the utterances, the goings and the comings of the four

CHINA'S MOST ANCIENT CITY

Sianfu Believed to Have Been a Metropolis Two Thousand Years Before Rome.

Sianfu is probably the most venerable city in China, and perhaps has had a longer continuous existence than Athens and Luxor. The Chinese themselves believe with some warrant that it was flourishing 2,000 years before Rome was founded. On the one hand, its story touches the first appearance of the Chinese race; on the other, it was again brought into a forefront of Chinese history when the late Empress Dowager Tzuhsi sought within its wall a refuge from the troops of the allies. It has been the stronghold of many monarchs, the bulwark against many revolts and invasions and the shelter of many religions.

Sianfu became a great city because it stood in the province of Shensi and, therefore, on the borders of the formidable deserts and rolling uplands whence came successive hordes of barbarians to threaten the peace of the Flowery Land. It has never lost its protective character, and 40 years ago the great Mohammedan rebellion vainly spent its strength against it. Nor has its strength entirely vanished. Its mighty walls, though useless against modern artillery, are far more formidable, and now in better repair, than those of Peking. Its population is variously estimated, but is numbered by the hundred thousand.

Islands.

Islands are used, like periods on pages, to dot the ocean with. They are frequently made by volcanoes, who get tired of lolling about in the center of the earth and poke their noses above water to see what it is all about.

Islands are covered with rocks, shrubs, natives and tourists. They are used as coal bins for nations and parading places for regiments.

Every island has a governor, who spends his time playing poker and exchanging views with distinguished authors like ourselves, as we pass in our steam-heated yachts.

Every island, like some railroads we know, and practically all trolley car companies, is completely surrounded by water. Upon its crest it proudly wears a hotel, which "overlooks" the sea. Any hotel on an island which does not do this is not worth being robbed in—Life.

Flowers on Icebergs.

Flowers blooming on icebergs would certainly be a rare sight, but travelers in the northern portions of the Pacific and sometimes in the North Atlantic have witnessed this strange but very beautiful spectacle. It appears that some animals carry on their feet a growth of moss, which is deposited on the ice while it is attached to the mainland in polar regions. In time this decays and forms a shallow soil, in which the seeds of buttercups and dandelions often find a lodging, borne by currents of wind that doubtless caught them up in some southern clime. These take root and bloom when the great gleaming iceberg floats out to sea and is carried southward, where the soft winds melt the surface and give the plants the moisture they need.

His Grievance.

"Look here," said the irate suburbanite to Mr. Josh, of Josh & Bluster, real estate agents, "you persuaded me to buy a lot at Swamphurst."
 "So I did," answered Mr. Josh. "Anything wrong with it?"
 "Just this: I expected to put a bungalow on that lot and not a house-boat!"
