The Turk still lurks in the Dardanelles.

Where there is a scrap there you will find the Jap.

Germany seems to be afraid to mobilize her army.

The county fair and the fair ones have been in all their glory.

Price boosting is recognized as neither a sport nor a profession.

We are not going to have war, we are going to have war revenue.

Some people wouldn't be optimistic if every cloud had a golden lining.

Whatever happens let us all hope that no harm will befall Mono Lisa.

Most candidates declare a political moratorium as soon as they are elected.

"Decisive battle near" it has been near so long, however, that it never gets any nearer.

Some people have so little to do that they talk politics after the election is over.

Germany wants to be the policeman of Europe and Germany wants to be the Big Bull.

The Czar didn't give Emperor William a chance to efface St. Petersburg from the map.

When the women get in control of the Government, there will be no duty on millinery goods.

Its no wonder Uncle Sam doesn't recognize any Mexican Government—they whiz by too fast.

Summer is over and the girls are wearing thicker clothes and we shall miss some familiar figures.

General Humidity held his ground almost as stubbornly as the Belgians have been holding theirs against the Germans.

General elections have been ordered in Mexico for November, and the New Orleans Playune thinks Caranza is the general who will be elected.

A casual glance over some of the exchanges that come to this office convinces us that most of the headline writers are in sympathy with the allies.

We are going to protest against the United States getting mixed up in the European war, even if France should go so far as to send Jack Johnson back to this country.

It is announced that Europe is beginning to import great quantities of American agricultural implements. They must be planning to hammer them into rapid firing arms.

Twice this week automobiles have failed in contests for "right of way" with locomotives at grade crossings, with four dead in each case. And still chauffeurs continue to try the game.

PAUL FORNWALT WEDS

Waits Five Years for Sweetheart's Liberty

True to her lover throughout almost five years that she spent in the penitentiary, Miss Ivy M. Maysilles, of Lancaster, was married at Middletown Thursday night to Paul G. Fornwalt of that place, by Rev. I. H. Albright.

Five years ago Miss Maysilles, who is now 26 years old, promised to be the wife of Fornwalt, who is now 24. Soon after that the young man was sent to the penitentiary for murder, having a sentence of from 4 years and seven months to twenty years. Miss Maysilles promised to wait for him. He resolved to turn over a new leaf, became a model prisoner, was paroled last week by the board of pardons, and was released last Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fornwalt will live at Middletown.

Fornwalt was convicted of second degree murder committed in Martic township, for which the two Aston boys were executed in the Lancaster county jail yard several years ago.
