The School Loan
product increased? Refuse customers? No, it erected larger tanks. Did Brandt & Stehman refuse the business when the demand for their products outgrew the capacity? No. They met the demand by modernizing and building.
Now we need more room in our public schools. Shall we establish a precedence and not meet the demand? Let us hope not.
When each and every one of the above successful business enterprises made their improvements, they carefully considered cost and found since, it was to their advantage.
Now comes the school loan question. Can we stand the cost? Why my dear reader, and here's hoping you are a taxpayer, this loan, if carried, won't cost you a cent and on the other hand do you realize how materially it will help you indirectly and your children (if you have any) directly? The change will be to their every advantage.
Before this loan was asked for the School Board carefully considered every side. They found that if the loan is sanctioned it will not be necessary to increase the school tax, and at the present rate the school debt has been decreased from time to time.
Last but not least the change will put us at par with other first-class schools in the county and we will climb from a second-class to a first-class high school.
Now how can any conscientious voter put his (x) after the word Against on his ballot in November?
