THE COUNTRY'S WAR AGAINST THE FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture

Fourteen states have been quarantined by the United States government for foot-and-mouth disease—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Kentucky. The disease is new to farmers of the United States, for there have been only five outbreaks in the history of the country and of these the first three were unimportant and the two others confined to a comparatively limited area. In Europe, however, it has long been a well known and dread scourge. Should it ever be permitted to establish itself as firmly here it would cause not only tremendous losses to stock but seriously interfere with the supply of meat for the people.

The foot-and-mouth disease affects particularly cattle, swine and sheep. It is characterized by sores in the mouth which make swallowing painful and frequently cause the animals to refuse all food, and by sores on the feet which cause lameness and in severe cases, occasionally result in the hoofs dropping off. The animals lose flesh with extraordinary rapidity and in the case of milk cows the milk supply is so seriously affected that it frequently dries up altogether. The first evidences of the disease are a chill followed quickly by fever, the temperature sometimes rising as high as 106 degrees Fahrenheit. Small vesicles or blisters about the size of a pea appear shortly after in the mouth and spread rapidly. As the disease advancesropy saliva hangs from the afflicted animal's mouth, which is opened and shut with a peculiar smacking sound. In a short time similar eruptions appear on the feet, which become tender, swollen and painful. In a few days the animal persists in lying down and bedsores soon develop. The udders of milk cows are also susceptible and the sores interfere with milking.

Most Contagious of Stock Plagues

Although the mortality is, except in very severe outbreaks, comparatively low, foot-and-mouth disease is probably the most contagious of all stock plagues. The germ which causes it is so small that it is invisible under the microscope and passes through the finest filter known to science. It can be carried in any one of a hundred ways. In addition to direct contact with affected animals the disease can be communicated by hay, straw, bedding, harness, ropes, in fact, anything that has ever indirectly come in contact with diseased animals. Cats, dogs and poultry have been known to carry the germ from farm to farm, and in particular this is frequently done by human beings. Already in the present outbreak cases are on record where the curiosity of farmers has led them to visit infected herds. On their return to their own homes these men have given the disease to their own animals. For this reason the authorities are urging upon every one the duty of refraining from such visits and of keeping strangers from visiting their stock.

The contagiousness of the disease indeed is such that when one animal in a herd becomes infected it is considered useless to attempt to save the remainder of the herd. For this reason the federal authorities have adopted the only practical method of stamping out the disease, namely, the slaughter of all cattle, sheep and swine on an infected farm. When a case is discovered a deep trench is dug, the animals led into it, slaughtered, their hides slashed and the carcasses buried with quicklime and then tramped under at least five feet of earth. It is advisable to slaughter the animals in the ditch itself in order that the ground may not become affected by dragging the dead bodies over it. The hides are slashed partly in order to facilitate the action of the lime and partly to remove any temptation to dig them up again and sell them. The entire farm premises are then thoroughly disinfected and no stock allowed upon them for a period of approximately sixty days.

Appraiser Values the Herd
In order to compensate the owner of his property thus condemned in the interest of the public welfare, an appraiser is appointed by the state authorities to value the herd. The sum thus fixed is divided equally between the state and the federal authorities. In the last outbreak in 1908 in New England it cost the federal government, which was then paying two thirds of the appraised values, approximately $300,000 for condemnation, slaughter and disinfection. The present outbreak is regarded as much more serious.

Better Return It
On Saturday after the shooting match at the Farmers' Inn, a good double barrel hammerless shot gun was stolen. The man who stole it, lives in Mt. Joy and was seen carrying it home. He is hereby notified to return same to the Farmers Inn before Saturday or suffer the consequences. If he returns it there will be no question asked. Signed: Lloyd Moore.

Big Farm for Rent
The Cameron farm, a short distance east of Maytown, in East Donegal township, and tenanted for a number of years by Mr. Samuel H. Tressler, is for rent. Mr. Tressler will move on his farm near the Rock Point school which he purchased several years ago. Any one interested in a farm of this kind should call on or address A. B. Lutz, R. D. Mount Joy.

Manheim Wants Extension
Ask That Trolley Line Be Run Through The Borough
Because of recent agitation on the part of Manheim residents to secure an extension of the Conestoga Traction Company lines into the borough instead of terminating at the outskirts of the town, and the continual refusal of the P. and R. Railway Co. to allow their tracks to be crossed, the matter was brought before the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission recently and on Saturday a body of civil engineers and representatives of this state body visited Manheim to secure necessary data upon which to base their decision.

neighbors. In addition to this danger there are also a number of cases on record in which both children and adults have become infected themselves. Ordinarily the disease is not serious in men, but weakly children who drink contaminated milk suffer so severely that in a few cases death has been known to result. With adults the malady usually takes no more serious form than a slight eruption in the mouth similar to fever blisters and possibly a similar eruption on the hands and fingers. There may be also some fever and nausea, but there is comparatively little danger. In countries where the disease is prevalent many authorities believe that it is fairly general in human beings but that the consequent disturbances in health are so slight that they are not brought to the attention of physicians.

Started in Michigan

The present outbreak originated in southern Michigan but how the germ found its way there is not yet definitely known. It seems probable that some cattle became infected, that their milk was sent to a creamery and the skim milk then returned to be fed to hogs. A herd of these infected hogs was then shipped to Chicago where they infected the stockyards before they themselves revealed any symptoms of the disease. Once this had taken place, every shipment of stock from Chicago to other parts of the country was likely to spread the infection. For this reason federal inspectors have for some time now been engaged in tracing, by the aid of bills of lading and other railroad records, each of these shipments to its destination and inspecting the stock there. This accounts for the discovery of cases in states as far removed from each other as Iowa and Massachusetts. The various quarantines already imposed have been designed to prevent the continued movement of cattle from infected or suspicious places. Once these movements have been halted and all the exposed cattle brought to a standstill, it will be possible for the federal authorities to locate all suspicious cases and by the slaughter of all exposed cattle ultimately eradicate the disease. The federal quarantines are accompanied by state and local quarantines of individual infected farms. From these no produce whatsoever can be sent out. In many cases children are not even permitted to go to school, and the farmer cannot drive his horses on the public highways.

Stock Raisers Should Help

The chief obstacle in the way of the successful prosecution of this campaign of isolation and extermination lies in the danger that there may be concealed sources of infection. Although the farmer receives the appraised value of his herd, it is inevitable that the summary slaughter of all his stock should cause him considerable inconvenience as well as indirect financial loss. To those who can see no further ahead than this and who do not realize what it would mean to the entire country if the disease were once to gain a firm foothold here, there is a natural temptation not to report suspicious cases to the authorities. This, however, is simply to cut off one's nose to spite one's face. The disease cannot be stamped out by ignoring it. The only possible way in which stock raisers can save themselves tremendous losses in the future is to co-operate now with the authorities by reporting every suspicious case of sore mouth or lameness among their stock and by assisting in enforcing the quarantines both federal and local, which have been declared.

Narrowly Escaped Death
Harry Weiland, one of the managers of the Kreider Shoe factory, at Elizabethtown, narrowly escaped from death on Wednesday, while at work. A belt became loosened from one of the machines and entangled itself with the belt of another machine, which caused the first one to be torn from its fastenings and hurled into the air. The machine, which weighed 500 pounds, fell so close to where Mr. Weiland was standing that it was thought by the employees that he was struck. They rushed to the spot only to find that he was unhurt, but badly scared.
