February 12th. Lincoln's Birthday

All men, in every land, without reference to ancient political convictions, honor the memory and celebrate the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. There is no reason why we may not, even in a clothing store advertisement, pay our tribute to his greatness.

Lincoln was a great servant of the people; he did what he could, according to his convictions, to help his fellow-men. There may not be many men now who could do what he did; and there may never again be such a crisis as that in which he served the world. But there are daily opportunities for showing, even in small affairs, the spirit of service.
