VERY VALUABLE INFORMATION FOR THE FARMERS

The Proper Time to Plant Apple Trees--Transplanting of Trees--Late Autumn Apples Should be Wrapped--How to Plant the Trees

A most troublesome disease that attacks blackberries is the rust, and it is very hard to get rid of. If, however, every plant, root and all, that becomes infected is dug out, the disease can be held in check to a great extent.

Plan to bury or otherwise store as much cabbage and as many turnips, beets, rutabagas, pumpkins, etc., as possible, for winter feed for the hens. Properly buried, a little later in the season, any of them will keep perfectly all winter. A plentiful supply of such things will add materially in keeping the hens in good laying condition--vigorous, alert, full of pep and on the job all the time.

A western horticulturist, who has had a very extensive experience in orchard planting, says that he makes it a practice when planting a large orchard, to follow his planters and try to pull up the trees. When a sharp jerk fails to loosen a tree, it is set firmly enough. But if the soil cracks or the tree pulls out, then it must be reset and the soil packed down as firmly as it should have been in the first place.

Late autumn apples can be wrapped in this paper, arranged in layers in barrels and boxes, set in a cool, dry place and kept till the following spring, their flavor being enhanced by the storage and close confinement. This is especially commendable where one is short on the winter varieties, or the autumn fruit can be used and the more valuable winter fruit can be marketed. Only smooth, round fruit should thus be stored, and one should make frequent inspection of the supply to see that no deterioration has set in, as this class of fruit spoils very quickly, contamination spreading rapidly, once it begins.

When the trees are taken from the nursery row, a large part of the root system it left in the ground; the equilibrium between the roots and the top of the tree is thus disturbed, and it is obvious that a part of the top should also be removed. Should the top be left unpruned, transpiration will take place too rapidly. The large amount of foliage requires more water and food material than the short root system can supply. Trees which have not been cut back will often start growing too vigorously only to die when the food and water which is stored in the plant, or which is easily available, is exhausted. All branches and torn roots should be cut back to healthy tissue leaving smooth cuts that will readily heal. Long, straggly roots should be shortened, and any masses or tangled roots should be shortened and thinned.

All perfectly hardy trees should be transplanted in the fall rather than the following spring, if we can rely upon the results of tests made at the Missouri agricultural experiment station. Jonathan apple trees planted in the fall made nearly twice as good a growth as those planted the next spring. Of cherry trees transplanted in the fall of 1913 every one lived, while only a third of those planted in the spring of 1914 survived the try summer of that year. Those which did live made only a quarter as good a growth as those planted the fall before. This comparison is based mainly on the terminal growth or length added to the branches which is a very important means of telling how an orchard is thriving. Every peach tree and others less hardy than apple and cherry trees do better when fall planted in the southern part of Missouri. Fall planting is better even farther north if followed by a mild winter, but a severe winter is likely to kill the trees. In orcharding fruit trees for fall planting, insist that they be dug and shipped just when the leaves begin to fall and the remaining leaves can be easily stripped from the nursery stock. These young, rapidly growing trees hold their leaves from two weeks to a month longer than those in the orchard which have been bearing for some time. During most seasons the best time for transplanting is during the first half of November, but planting any time before the ground freezes has been found to give better results than spring planting.

Will Have Electric Lights

Bainbridge is soon to have electric lights, the current being furnished by the York Haven Water Company. The latter is at present stringing wires from their plant on the York county side of the river several miles West of Bainbridge to the plant of the Kennedy Refractories Company which is just East of Bainbridge. The wires will run through the little village and current will be furnished to the stores and houses in that town.

The Kennedy Company will sell electricity almost exclusively to operate their machinery, most of which is now in place.

The people of Bainbridge are delighted over the prospects of getting electric light for their streets and homes.

MUST RECOUNT THE VOTE

Court Issues That Order on Marietta Election Board

An order was made by the court Saturday morning on the custodian of the ballot box of the First Ward of Marietta borough, to bring into court the ballot box of that district on Saturday, Dec. 18, so that the vote for Judge of Elections can be recounted.

Gottlieb Miller, the Republican candidate, filed a petition for a recount. His petition set forth that he and Paul McDivitt, Democrat, were candidates for that office at the November election and that each received 63 votes; that one vote was counted for McDivitt which should not have been, because there was a cross in the Democratic square and also an X after Miller's name. This vote Miller contends was illegal because two candidates were voted for. The election board counted it for McDivitt.

The December College Times

The December or Christmas number of the College Times, a monthly publication issued by the Homerian and Literary Societies of Elizabethtown College, is off the press and being distributed. Each number is proving more creditable. This last issue contains many interesting articles such as Home Influence on Character, The Function of Christian Education, How to Treat the Aged, together with good notes from the various departments of the College.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.

An Old Fashioned Remedy: Turning backward the leaves of time we can find in almost forgotten pages many simple and practical methods of relief from pain and suffering.

Several years ago a physician of the old school, died at the advanced age of 90 years. He had often told me that at the age of 25 he was told that he would die within a year of Consumption. He lived a temperate, practical, out-door life, practicing deep breathing and rational exercise, studied medicine, but discarded much of its teachings and practiced common sense on himself as well as his patients with splendid results. After his death I purchased his library in which I found many old volumes relating to home remedies, and as I had many books along the same line of teaching his was an unexpected treasure box.

Yesterday I picked up one of my latest medical magazines and was both amused and delighted to find a very serious and learned discussion regarding the merits of the newest discovery of a very able practitioner in one of the hospitals of Berlin, who gives to the world a paper in which "brilliant results are recorded" through the use of soft soap.

Those of you that have been reading the Home Health Club lectures for the past quarter of a century will laugh with me when you remember how often I have directed the use of this inexpensive and efficient remedy.

After reading the article and comments, experiences of other physicians, etc., I looked among my books and found the method was used about 80 years ago in England by a good samaritan who nursed his neighbors. He described its use in the same ailments referred to in the magazine of today, but his method of using it was much better and more effective and also more scientific; moreover he gives a simple and practical reason for its use and tells how and why it is effective, while the doctors of today confess that they are unable to tell why the "brilliant results" are secured.

Now, if you will turn to your Home Health Club book, Vol. 2, and look for the lesson entitled "Soapy Blanket Fomentations," you will be able to apply the treatment in a very effective manner, and you will get "brilliant results" in cases of nervous disorders, cardiac disturbances, respiratory diseases, (notably chronic bronchitis, Emphysema, bronchial Asthma), gastric intestinal disturbances, nervous dyspepsia and inveterate Hemiplegia.

In addition to the troubles relieved by the hospital referred to you will remember that the very best results are to be had in cases of kidney trouble and in dropsy. Of course, in most cases of dropsy the heart is the organ that requires relief, but the soapy blanket fomentation does the work in a very surprising and satisfactory manner. Of course, at a hospital they would naturally use surgeons green soap, which is made, usually of linseed oil and potash, but while this is most convenient for use in applying it as an inunction, you will find the common yellow laundry soap quite as effective when used in the simple and safe manner described in your club books.

The method employed in the hospital after the rediscovery of this old remedy is to use about a tablespoonful of the liquid or green soap and distribute it over the surface of the body where it is desired to secure results and then rub it in for about five minutes. Allow it to remain on for another five minutes and then sponge it gently off with lukewarm water. After reading over again the chapter referred to in your book, I think you will not use the method as it is not complete and not likely to give the same satisfactory results as the old-fashioned method will give.

Resolutions of Respect

At a special meeting of the Mt. Joy Cemetery Association, resolutions were adopted on the death of Martin S. Bowman as follows:

Whereas death having again summoned a member of our board, one whose loss we deeply deplore, be it resolved:--That this association has lost a faithful and devoted member, who has served in this capacity for many years, one whose presence and counsel we shall miss, and the community sustains the loss of an able, upright, Christian citizen, whose life and example are worthy of emulation.

Resolved:--That we extend to the bereaved widow and family, our heartfelt sympathy in their sorrow, and pray that the God of all grace may sustain and comfort them. Resolved further, that these resolutions, be spread on our minutes, be published in our town papers, and a copy handed to his family.
