Earth Has Two Atmospheres.

Until recently it has been believed that the temperature of the atmosphere decreased regularly in proportion to height above the earth. But observations made with sounding balloons have proved that this hypothesis is far from being correct. Beyond from seven and a half to nine miles of altitude the lowering of the temperature stops, and at still higher altitudes it begins slowly to increase.

W. J. Humphrey, summing up and interpreting all the results of recent explorations of the upper air, thinks that the earth should be considered as being surrounded by two atmospheres, distinct and superimposed, which mingle scarcely at all with each other. The lower atmosphere is that in which are produced those troubles which cause changes in the weather; in this the temperature decreased rapidly with the altitude; this atmosphere contains almost two-thirds of the total mass of oxygen and ozone, a slightly larger fraction of carbonic acid and almost all the water vapor. The higher atmosphere floats above this, almost as oil floats upon water; in it is scarcely any water vapor; the temperature rises with the altitude, first very rapidly, then more slowly.

THE POWER OF SNAILS.

Two Snails Pull A Load of Two Pounds for Investigator.
One day, by way of experiment, I harnessed two common garden snails to a toy gun carriage, to see if they could pull it along. Although the gun-carriage was a heavy leaden one, the snails pulled it so easily that I loaded the body of the carriage with small shot. The snails, however, were more than equal to the task. Anxious to test their powers still further, I attached a top cannon (made of lead and brass) behind the gun-carriage, but the snails and their additional load moved on once again with the same apparent ease. Out of curiosity I decided to weigh the cannon, gun-carriage and shot, and to my great surprise found the total weight to be almost one pound! I venture to think this a very good load for two snails to manage.

TRAFFIC ON THE DEAD SEA.

One Small Sailing Boat Carries Most of the Passengers and Freight.
"Many false and foolish reports about the Dead Sea—that strange and interesting lake—have been circulated," said Abraham S. Abrams, of Jerusalem and London, who is on a tour of the United States.
"Much has appeared from time to time in papers and periodicals about steamboats navigating the Dead Sea," continued the banker. "This too is a fabrication. The only boat on the Dead Sea is a small sailing boat about twenty feet long.

"This vessel makes trips as the wind allows from the north end of the sea to the bay on the eastern side of the tongue that divides the water near the middle. At this terminus some Jews are located. The whole concern is, in fact, in the hands of Jews, who, at a low rate, buy wheat and barley from the Arabs to be delivered on the seashore. From there it is shipped to the Jericho side, and carried on donkeys to Jerusalem, where it finds ready sale at a good price."
"When adverse winds blow the little craft is in danger of being swamped, for the so-called Dead Sea becomes a living mass of waves. Not long ago I spent four nights such a never will be forgotten on these waters, and the smartness of the old man at the helm and his boy with the sails saved us from being wrecked again and again. A charge of one mejele, which is about 80 cents a trip, is made for each passenger, and for a unique voyage it is not exorbitant.

There is some talk about a small steam tug being put on the sea, but the authorities are loath to grant permission. It will be a great boon when it does arrive, as it will bring the east and west sides of Jordan nearer to each other for communication and trading purposes."

ELECTRICITY AND FIRES.

Electricity Not So Dangerous As Is Generally Thought.
Simply because Benjamin Franklin associated electricity with lightning, and that most people are more or less afraid of lightning, electricity is believed to be a dangerous factor in fire hazards. This is not true, for it has been proven time and again that electricity causes less fires than a number of other things about the house or office.

Last year nearly five thousand fires were reported in the city of Chicago. A careful record was kept of the origin of these fires and the result showed that only about one per cent could be laid to electricity. Only one fire was caused by lightning and thirty-seven by electric wires. Of course, the causes of most of these fires were unknown, but the careless use of matches caused 164 fires in 135 days; stoves, chimneys and flues caused over three hundred; fifty-two were incendiary; spontaneous combustion caused 51; gasoline, 46; thawing waterpipes, 43; explosion of gas, 38; gas jets, 26; oil lamps, 35.

Of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Miller, of Landisville. The cause of her death was heart trouble, with which she had suffered for a number of years. We make a big sacrifice, for the old pens are frequently worthless, but the splendid things you say about the Crocker Pen induces many others to buy it, so although we lose at the start, we gain at the finish.
The pens we offer are the genuine Crocker Ink-Tite Pens worth the full retail price. It is simply impossible to buy a better fountain pen anywhere.
