EDITORIALS

O'Leary and O'Roosevelt are running a close race and true to form.

Oklahoma is now reported infested by train robbers from the wilds of Detroit.

In Mr. Vance McCormick's opinion this it no time to stop praying for the President.

The career of Mr. Hughes as a candidate ended November 7th but the Colonel will run right along.

From present prospects Romania's ruler will be lucky if he partakes of his Christmas dinner at home.

Not even the fervent support of Norman Hapgood can shake the President's confidence in victory.

In an exceedingly crusty editorial the "Work" of New York complains that the pie has gone up.

Cleveland dental students having organized a strike, it should prove a crowning success if they all pull together.

In claiming that France has regained her prestige, Premier Briand doubtless will concede that Verdun helped.

Another way of getting rid of the boll weevil would be to make him over into explosives together with the cotton.

The German druggist who married a princess probably will compromise by recommending something to his customers that is just as good.

About this time of the year one scarcely blames the early settlers for feeling that Indian summer was entirely too good for an Indian.

Our idea of the worst henpecked husband that ever lived is the Springfield man who "took advantage" of his wife's absence to hang himself.

And the chastised Roumanians haven't even that inestimable consolation of knowing that it hurts the enemy as much as it does them.

The denial of Colliers "that Hughes is a Wall Street candidate" may be true. Wall Street is merely for "anything to beat Wilson."

If the price of beef and mutton goes a little higher, the irrational prejudice harbored against 'possum by some men will be abandoned.

It wasn't until the terrible fierceness of the U-53's nature became known that it was fully realized why everybody loved the Deutschland so.

A posthumous message from Lord Roberts declares that war is a nation's tonic. Of course, but there is such a thing as its being Teutonic.

If one could be sure that he could afford the eggs, all misgivings about the next Christmas might be dismissed even in prohibition State.

Nevertheless we might suspect that the average American citizen suffers more from the inflated price of stocks than from the inflated cost of wheat.

It now begins to appear that the U-53 could have been of vastly more assistance had it preceded the Bremen instead of following it several months later.

A letter in a Birmingham newspaper says that 40,000 persons have left that city by reason of prohibition. It must be frightful to be sold sober in Birmingham.

However, the fact remains that no one can recall any utterance by Mr. Roosevelt while president in which he referred to the head of the nation as a public servant.

The cost of living has gone up forty-five per cent in England since the war began. Dealers in food products blame Wilson for it.

Harvey Wittle has resumed the butchering business and is out daily among farmers slaughtering porkers for winter consumption.

Miss Estella Good, one of town's young ladies has returned to her parental home after a week sojourn to friends in Lebanon county.

Rabbits are plentiful and it is an exceedingly poor shot or an abnormally poor unlucky huntsman who returns home empty-handed these proemial days of the bunny season.

These are the days to go to the Furnace Hill to see the persimmon trees laden down with the palatable element and the sight will stick to your memory like an unpaid grocery bill.

Harvey T. Kulp, who recently disposed of his town property, had sale of part of his personal effects Saturday afternoon, will move to Elizabethtown in a few weeks to engage in the milk business.

A. F. Diffenderfer was called to Moyer's Church near Bachmanville, Saturday evening, where he promulgated a rousing exhortation to saints and sinners. He evolved the essence of christianity so tenaciously that the impious wept.

The road supervisor board convened at their usual retreat, the Milton Grove diversary, Saturday A. M., with a full quorum and transacted business of vital importance relative to the improvement of macadamed roads in their bailwick.

Thugs, belonging to the pilfering fraternity broke into M. K. Heistand's mill Friday night and stole a quantity of grain and flour. The loss to Mr. H. is not as yet public. Observation discloses the stolen goods were removed in two automobiles.

Wm. M. Hollowbush, Esq., a product of Mt. Joy, noted as a brilliant legal light of the Lancaster bar, put in his appearance in town the weekend. This congruent and exalted visitor registered with your scribe for awhile, with whom hospitality reigned supreme.

The Mount Joy township school directors held their regular menstrual convention with a full quorum at their rendezvous in the High School building Saturday morning. Harmoniously the able and efficient corps of pedagogs, acquired compensation for their services rendered during the month of October.

For the past month residents in the upper tier of the township were annoyed by petty thieving but the pilferers have changed their quarters and are prowling in this locality. Last week about twenty-five chickens were stolen from the premises of Archey Emenheiser and the majority of our citizens are complaining of the disappearance of their fowls from the henneries.
