ECHO OF TITANIC DISASTER

Researches of Ice Patrol Boats Have Exploded Many Theories Held in 1912.

After the loss of the giant White Star liner Titanic in April, 1912, by striking an iceberg, there was much discussion in Europe and America as to the possibility of adopting measures to lessen the likelihood of such disasters in the future, says P. T. McGrath in the American Review of Reviews. An "international conference for the saving of life at sea," which was held at London, resulted, among other things, in an undertaking by the principal marine powers of the world to maintain an ice patrol on the north Atlantic from February to June in each year. It was agreed that this ice patrol should be carried out by the United States on behalf of the various countries represented, the cost to be borne by them pro rata, Britain to pay 25 per cent of the total, Germany, France and the United States 15 per cent each and Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Italy, Holland, Norway, Russia and Sweden from 4 to 2 per cent each.

The American authorities inaugurated this patrol service with the naval scout cruisers Birmingham and Chester, but later assigned the revenue cutters Seneca and Miami to this duty, which ships have since continued it. The first season St. Johns was chosen for the work, but ultimately it was found more convenient to utilize Halifax, Nova Scotia, because the area patrolled was south of St. Johns and extended farther south as the season advanced and the armadas of icebergs became more numerous.

A theory exploded by the ice patrol ships is that the proximity of ice is marked by a notable lowering of air temperature. Experiments covering three years have proved that such is not the case, and that as a rule there is little or no change in the temperature of the air near an iceberg. Equally fallacious is the idea that the presence of a berg is denoted by a lowering of the temperature of the water. As a matter of fact the very contrary is the case. Other theories, as that echoes indicate the presence of bergs, that ice discloses itself through what is known as the "ice blink" and that submarine "ears" on ships will reveal the nearness of ice by its peculiar motion through the waves have been proved equally unfounded. In truth, the testimony of the commanders of these patrol ships is that the only safe way to navigate regions of icebergs is to stop during thick weather and to run very slowly on dark nights.

Mr. Wisler Cured of Indigestion
"Some time in 1909 when I had an attack of indigestion and everything looked gloomy to me, I received a free sample of Chamberlain's Tablets by mail. I gave them a trial and they were such a help to me that I bought a package, and I can truthfully say that I have not had a similar attack since." writes Wm. B. Wisler, Douglassville, Pa. 6-4-44

HER MOTHER FINDS REAL BENEFACTOR

Mrs. Jennie Sather, 139 Melrose Ave., Lansdowne, a suburb of Philadelphia, tells how her mother met a real benefactor: "Mother suffered from diabetes, stomach trouble and a run-down system. She was very much weakened and showed symptoms of gastritis. A friend of mother's on Susquehanna Ave., Phila., had the same complaint and recommended Tanlac to mother. Tanlac has done my mother so much good."

The genuine J. I. Gore Co., Tanlac is sold here by W. D. Chandler, druggist, Mount Joy, Pa., and other leading druggists.

Your Dreams and Your Health.
Scientific dream interpretation helps us to see ourselves as we really are, gives us intimate glimpses of the subconscious as well as conscious desires, fears and modes of thinking that enter into the making of our character and the shaping of our conduct.

The compilers of the gaudy little paper-covered dream books once so much in vogue went, rightly enough, on the theory that dreams are symbolic. But they erred by assuming that they are always symbolic of future events, and that any particular dream element can always be interpreted as symbolic of the same kind of future event.

Those who expect modern science to provide them with a dream manual akin to the old dream books, so that everyone may become his own interpreter at a glance, are consequently doomed to disappointment. Accurate dream interpretation almost always means time and effort. But it is well worth the trouble it costs. All who would discover unsuspected weaknesses and defects in themselves, who would gain a maximum of health, happiness and efficiency through right living, will do well to seek to have their dreams analyzed.

And it is not only for the light it throws on one's nature and character that scientific dream interpretation is worth while. There are dreams which, rightly interpreted, throw light on the state of the dreamer's physical health, sometimes enabling action to be taken that will avert serious disease. There also are dreams which give valuable information regarding people of the dreamer's acquaintance. There are other "exceptional" dreams, needlessly looked upon with superstitious awe by many persons.—Mother's Magazine.

Americans Like Noise.
Of all things which Americans detest, quiet comes first. Take as a proof this matter of pianos and talking machines.

Every workday there now comes from American factories an even 1,000 pianos and about 1,800 talking machines. You will notice that the piano has not been entirely silenced by mechanical music.

Indeed, the value of pianos made daily in our country is three and one-half times as great as the value of phonographs, but the number of pianos now turned out is smaller than it was five years ago, while the number of its great rival has increased by half.

Uncle Sam tells us that two years ago we paid $15,000,000 for talking machines and $1,000,000 for the records which they played. No wonder talking machine stock is quoted at about $100 a share and stockholders bank upon dividends of $120 a share this year.—Philadelphia Ledger.
