OUR DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

ECONOMIZE IN BUYING

"City people who want to swat the H. C. L. should stop buying produce in such small quantities," says Guy C. Smith, Director of the Bureau of Markets, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. "A party wrote to this office the other day saying that he couldn't understand why we are advising the people to cart tomatoes when in his town tomatoes were selling for 20c for a quart strawberry basket full. It didn't seem to him that there was a very great economy in canning such high priced tomatoes. Whoever heard of buying tomatoes in quart baskets for the purpose of canning and yet it is that sort of thing that a great many people are doing today who are complaining about high prices! Tomatoes in 10 quart baskets are selling in many of our markets for 60 to 75c a basket or even less and it is difficult to understand why anyone who wants to can tomatoes should buy in smaller quantities than that."

"What is true of tomatoes, as illustrated in this case, is also true of a great deal of the other buying that is done in the markets. The smaller quantity or package of goods the higher is the rate ordinarily paid for it and especially is there a marked difference between the small retail quantities and the larger wholesale units."

POTATO WART

Much interest throughout the country is now centered on Pennsylvania, where the struggle for control of the dreaded potato wart disease is now being waged, for to have this disease become general over the potato growing districts of America would be nothing short of a general national catastrophe.

After the finding of the wart disease in the anthracite mining regions last fall, a hurried survey was made and all the areas found infested were quarantined. This summer no effort has been spared to make this quarantine as rigidly effective that the disease could not spread into the rest of the State. For carrying out this work the Bureau of Plant Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, is employing a force of men and it is their aim, first, to see that no potatoes or disease bearing material shall be taken out of the wart section and, second, to examine every potato grown in the quarantine area. As some seven thousand permits to plant potatoes have been issued in the quarantined district, the examination of the potatoes in every one of these garden plots is an immense task.

In addition to the above work, the Bureau of Plant Industry has in the field a force of survey men who will examine other sections of the state for the disease during the potato digging season. The most of this survey work will be carried out in the rest of the anthracite coal region, and in the western soft coal districts where conditions are so similar that it is thought the disease may have been introduced theretofore.

In this survey work the staff of State College inspectors employed by the Federal Horticulture Board are also taking part and the work has been planned so as to avoid all duplication and to cover the greatest territory possible.

Up to September 1st, this survey has disclosed the presence of wart in four small boroughs closely adjacent to the main quarantined region in Schuylkill county. These are typical mining towns such as are found throughout all the district under quarantine. None of the farms outlying in the valleys from this district have yet shown any trace of wart. In order to include these four towns in the quarantine district, a new quarantine was declared on August 21st covering these towns as well as the original district.

The disease has also been found in Cambria county in the western part of the state by one of the State College survey force. It was present in only a single garden in a small mining village, but its occurrence here indicates the strong probability of other similar cases in the western mining region. The survey effort in this region will therefore be redoubled and made as intensive as possible, so that nothing except the slightest attacks of wart will escape detection.

STABLE MANURE TOO VALUABLE TO BE WASTED

The Bureau of Statistics, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, figures that the manure produced at a very low estimate in a year by the horses of Pennsylvania is worth $9,097,000 compared with the cost of commercial fertilizer. Cattle, $19,002,000; hogs, $6,165,000; sheep $2,586,000. Total $37,750,000. That is when it is properly cared for and handled in such manner that 100 per cent of the plant food is saved.

A great quantity of the organic matter contained in manure is lost before it ever reaches the field. Many farmers still pursue the habit of piling manure up in the barnyard and wait for some more convenient season to haul it out. In this way the most important elements leach out and are lost. The practical farmers are obviating this difficulty by either hauling the manure to the fields as it is produced or building concrete manure pits for holding same.

The annual loss of fertilizing materials is enormous in this country through careless handling of manure. This loss can be easily prevented in a large measure by proper methods of handling. While many farmers are getting the most from the manure produced on their farms, yet many could well exemplify the European farmer in this matter who saves carefully and utilizes every pound of manure available.

The farmer who feeds live stock may figure that he is receiving a double remuneration from his crops: First, from the marketing of feeds

IN MISERY FOR YEARS

Mrs. Courtney Tells How She Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."

—Mrs. LIZZIE COURTNEY, 108 8th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
