George Brown Sr.

George Brown Sr., who can justly be termed the grand old man of Mt. Joy, passed away at his home here this morning in the eighty-ninth year of his age.

There is probably no other man in Mount Joy today, who has done more for its industrial improvement, than Mr. Brown, being the founder of the extensive cotton and woolen mills here. He was born in Yorkshire, England, in October 1831 and is the son of Benjamin Brown who operated the first power carding machine ever constructed. He was married in his native country to Miss Esther Beardsall also of Yorkshire, who died in 1873, leaving ten children.

Mr. Brown started into business at Mount Joy with only twelve looms, and some of the magnificent advance of this concern may be obtained by the statement that now 250 looms are in operation daily.

Deceased was a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church of this place. He was also a vestryman and rector's warden of that church. He served several terms as a Councilman of this borough, being a member of that body when the present council chamber was built.
