THE QUESTION OF FURNITURE QUALITY

There are few things that quality effects so vitally as furniture.

Often things that people buy for personal wear and for home use are not always expected to last a long time, but this cannot be said about furniture. When you buy furniture you are buying something you expect to render you long service. It will if you buy it here, because here we think of quality first. All the furniture we buy must measure up to requirements which we make as to the manner of workmanship. And, after all, in the long run, well-made furniture is the cheapest sort of furniture to buy. We invite comparison, look around, compare qualities and prices and then come here and see our vast assortment.

FOUND ANGLING GOOD SPORT

Many Notables Have Been Devotees of Sport Immortalized By Sir Izaak Walton.

When President Harding prepared himself for the responsibilities of his great office by spending a few weeks fishing in Florida he added one more to the long list of notables who have been devotees of that sport. It is recorded that Noah was not only a good boatman, but a skillful angler as well. Long before the flood, and far away in the mists of time, there is a Babylonian legend that Belus, son of Nimrod, discovered fishing. The first authentic record of angling appears when the Lord asks Job: "Can't thou take out a fish with a hook?" The great Homer immortalizes the art in the "Iliad" and "Odyssey," stating that godlike men, when pinched for dinner fished with crooked hooks, and even dived for oysters. It was Plato, the Greek philosopher, who once said: "There is nothing in angling that is noble, or daring, or requiring skill." Charlemagne, who dominated western Europe in the eighth century, advised his subjects to take up the art of angling in order to be content. "Because," said he, "I have never yet known an angler who was melancholy." But the greatest fisherman and philosopher of modern times is undoubtedly Sir Izaak Walton. In his "Compleat Angler" he indicates the progress of fishing, particularly on luring trout. He had a different colored fly for every month in the year. His books are a source of information for all, and it has been said that in them a child may wade and the tallest giant swim. "Angling," said Izaak, "is like mathematics. In that it can never be fully learned, at least not so fully but that there will always be room for experiment by some succeeding angler."—Detroit News.

THAT'S THE STORY HE TELLS

But It Certainly Was Unfortunate that the "Tonic" Should Explode When It Did.

An Indiana manufacturer recently enjoyed a restful Sunday in the quiet of his own home, a steady downpour of rain giving every assurance of his not being disturbed. Early in the evening, however, he concluded a little walk would be beneficial, and remembering his wife having mentioned she was in need of another bottle of her favorite spring water, he donned a raincoat and braved the elements.

Pocketing his purchase, and homebound, he thought to have a look in on the evening service at the church of which he was a devoted and valued member. Standing in the rear of the church, as there was an unusually large congregation, he became much interested in the sermon, when to his horror there came a terrific bang, followed by a deluge of foam flying in every direction; all eyes were turned his way and the sermon temporarily discontinued while the erstwhile devout church member beat his hasty retreat amid the laughter of the entire congregation, having no opportunity to explain that he was carrying home a harmless bottle of "tonic" for his wife.

Gold Found in Ireland.

The recent discovery of gold in the streams of County Westmeath, Ireland, calls attention to the fact that the ancient tribesmen of that country must have been expert metallurgists. Although not noted as a gold producing country, Ireland is one of the greatest storehouses of antiquities in the world. It is a literal mine of personal ornaments, implements, rings, torques and other Celtic antiquities. Kemble observed that, "with the sole exception of the museums of Scandinavia, there is scarcely one European collection which shows anything like so great a wealth of personal ornaments made of the precious metal as Ireland." It is almost certain that the gold ornaments found in such abundance were made from the precious metal found in Irish streams.

Elevated Railroad for Cuba.

Why anyone in Cuba wants an elevated railroad thrusting steel rods through the palm fronds and making the tropic night hideous with shrieking and rumbling is a puzzle to an inhabitant of a northern city, but one thing is clear from an item in a Havana newspaper. Controversy has begun long before the first riveter has put the lustiest tom-tom beaters of the island to shame. The question now under discussion is: Shall state, province and municipality share the expense of construction with the traction company? Strikes, legislative inquiries and franchise suits may follow.

He Needed Help.

"All kinds of communications are received in a newspaper office. For instance, an old subscriber asks us to tell him how to get rid of a troublesome guest who came to stay a few days and has been there a month."

"We haven't time to answer a foolish question like that. Just pigeon-hole it."

"No, I'm going to answer it somehow. The writer states in a postscript that if we don't give him some advice he's going to set fire to his house."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Tendency.

"Our best political life, whatever the hewers may say, is tending toward equality, beauty and holiness."—Vachel Lindsay.

Who Wants a Farm

FRENCH PLAYHOUSE ON BOAT

Actors in Remarkable Theatre Are Said to Find Their Occupation a Pleasant One.

France has a playhouse, built on a barge, which travels from Tours to Strasbourg. It is a gorgeous affair painted in white and silver and called the "bateau-theatre." It wanders along the canals and wherever it stops the French, who have few entertainments, crowd into the Fulminant to see a dramatic representation. It is agreeable life to move leisurely by canal and river, to stop where one pleases, to play to a crowded house in a salle, which is always ready, to give pleasure to a whole community and profit to oneself. The room where the performances take place is spacious enough. It holds five hundred persons, and every one of the faunions covered in red velvet in this blue and gold decorated hall is occupied whenever the floating theatre casts anchor in an out-of-the-way town. The actors are their own mariners. There is much work to be done on board any kind of boat, as all who have ever helped to sail a yacht will agree. They all lend a hand. They scrub the decks and they make the preparations which are constantly called for. What do they not do? They go out shopping—and is there anything so delightful as to shop always in strange towns? They prepare their play bills and announce their advent. The mere business of acting is only an incident in this varied life.

LINKED WITH GLORIOUS PAST

Town of Steinamanger Within Territory Once Important Part of the Old Roman Empire.

Perhaps it was not without deep sentimental reasons that former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary chose the town of Steinamanger—to the Hungarians, Szombathely—as a place from which he hoped to receive the acclaim of his former subjects as their returned ruler, says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

It has been the cherished policy of the Hapsburg rulers of Austria-Hungary to rejuvenate the old "Holy Roman Empire," the Frankish and later the German union which claimed to be the heir to the power and overlordship of Rome. The affiliations of what was Austro-Hungarian territory before the World war, with the old Roman empire, were perhaps closer through Steinamanger than through any other town. The present town is in the site of the Roman Sabria, which was the capital of one of the chief divisions of Pannonia—the name given by the Romans to the province which covered the heart of modern Austria-Hungary.

A "Sand-Bow."

The unusual optical phenomenon of a rainbow produced by the sun shining not on rain-drops, but on particles of sand suspended in the air by wind, was witnessed over a part of the Great Salt Lake by some surveying parties.

The colors were very brilliant, and there was a secondary bow visible. The main bow was fully double the width of an ordinary rainbow. Only a segment of it was seen. The sand was colitic, consisting of calcareous spherules of fairly uniform size, ranging between the limits of No. 8 and No. 10 shot, which are polished and exhibit a pearly luster. It is pointed out that the production of the bow must have been due to reflection from the outer surfaces of the spherules, and cannot be explained on the rule of refraction and total reflection, generally applied in the explanation of the rainbow.

Selenium a Rare Element.

Selenium is a rare and little-used element described by the United States Geological survey, Department of the Interior, as having its greatest use in giving a red color to glass, such as that used in railroads for signal lights, and in coloring enameled ware red. It is also used to overcome the natural green color of ordinary glass. Selenium is peculiar in being a very poor conductor of electricity in the dark and a fairly good conductor in the light and is used in several electric devices whose utility depends on this peculiarity. It has been used in telephoning along a ray of light and in transmitting sounds and photographs from one place to another over a wire.

China to Have Large Mint.

One of the largest mints in the world, with a possible daily output of 500,000 silver dollars, is to be erected at Shanghai, China, at a cost of about $2,000,000, under the direction of an American expert. When completed, in about two years, it will absorb some 14 tons of silver a day in its task of establishing a standardized currency in China, where the present unit of value, the Mexican dollar, competes with as many varieties of coin as there are provinces. The Chinese tael, now used for reckoning, is not a coin at all, but a measured slug of silver, the value of which varies in different parts of the country.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Disappointed Hopes.

"Hiram," said Mrs. Cornstossel, "our boy Josh has learned to play a regular tune on his new violin." "That boy won't do nothin' but waste time. What does he want with a regular tune? I was educatin' him for leader of a jazz orchestra."

Fordson

$625 f. o. b. Detroit

The Fordson saves from thirty to fifty per cent of the farmer's time.

The Fordson plows, harrows, drills as much ground in the same time as from four to six horses. Many farmers say it does the work of eight horses.

The Fordson does for the farmer just what machine power does for the manufacturer—it enables him to manufacture his product at less cost. And that is what the farmer wants; grow his crops more cheaply and make his margin of profit greater. And the Fordson will help him do it.

Let us prove this to you by demonstration on your own farm. Just phone us or drop us a card.
