Eel-Like Water Dog. The helibender is a large, ugly looking but harmless salamander, found in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and southward. The hellbender is known 5 as an alligator and water dog. Two species inhabit the central parts of the United States, of which the more common and widespread is the Necturus maculatus. It reaches the length of one foot to twenty inches, is smooth, slimy and brown blotched, with the tufted gills dark red. These creatures remain mostly among weeds or rocks at the bottom of the water during the daytime, but at night, they move about, often with quick ell-like motions, in search of crawfish, worms, bait off the fisherman's hook. It is tenacious of life and can live for hours out of water. They spawn during the months of April and May. The spawn much resembles that of frogs, but is lighter in color.

Nature's Fireless Cooker. Western towns have lately been preparing and maintaining camping grounds, equipped with water and lights, for the convenience of automobile tourists. There is at least one spot where natural fireless cookers are among the gratuitous provisions for the comfort of the touring public. This unique inducement is found at Hot Springs, Nev., where boiling water has been spouting up from the unknown depths of the sun-baked earth. Near this remarkable hot spring there are several "cooking holes," excavations about three feet in depth, whose sides are lined with sheet iron. At the bottom the boiling water gurgles. > Prehistoric Creature. The remains of what is described as the largest and most mysterious land animal that ever walked the earth have been found in Baluchistan. The creature was probably more like a rhinoceros than like any other animal of today, but it had a neck that suggests that of the giraffe. Two of the neck bones, compared with similar bones of the largest previously known land animals, make them look small, and nothing but dynamite or a stump puller could have drawn one of its teeth .- Youth's Companion.

TOWN BUILT ON GREAT ROCK

Ancoma, in Mexico, Surely Has Site Such as No Other Place on Earth Can Boast.

To live on top of a mushroom would be a peculiar sensation. If the mushroom were of gigantic provention or historical development has portions and were planted so as to overhang the sea, the experience would be very similar to that of living nica, Mother Shipton was born near in the town of Ancoma, which is three Yorkshire a good many years before miles south of the Mesa Escantada in Mexico, says the Christian Science Monitor. The strange mushroom-like rock on which the town was begotten, like the Wizard Merlin stands is a splendid specimen of of King Arthur's Round Table, of a fantastic erosion, having overhanging sides nearly 400 feet high. The top of the rock is comparatively level, and is about 70 acres in extent. It is notched with dizzy chasms. The greater portion of it overhangs the sea like an immense mushroom, and the oddest thing is that it should have a town at the top. Now, this town pertains to a past civilization. It is one of the most perfect specimens of the pre-historic Pueblan architecture. With inconceivable labor this town in the air was built and fortified for the safety of its inhabitants. It was reached by a mere trail of toe-holes up the stem of the mushroom. The that she had never been known to age of the town is not known, but it was already old in 1540, when the first explorers visited it.
