Before the War Prices ON Real Estate

Within the past few days I have listed some "real bargains" in rural real estate, and when I say bargains I mean it.

Here You Are

A 70-acre farm, 50 acres tillable and 20 acres pasture, on state highway adjoining Elizabethtown boro, good house, newly remodeled and very modern barn for 45 head of stock, water in every stall, concrete floors and entries, new silo containing nearly 1,000 worth of feed, new hog sty, shedding for tobacco, wagon shed, large poultry house, slate roofs on nearly all buildings, good water.

THINK OF THIS

In addition to the farm here's what goes with it. Four Head of Horses, from 4 to 8 yrs old. 12 Head of Cows, some registered, 5 Chester White Sows, some with pigs, 1 Boar, 200 Chickens, about 40 Ducks. A large and complete line of farm implements, including 4 wagons, reaper, tobacco planter, harrows, plows, in fact everything. 9,000 tobacco lath. Place will bear closest inspection. If interested get busy as this proposition can't last long.

OUR DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

THREE METHODS AVAILABLE FOR INOCULATING ALFALFA

Farmers sowing alfalfa this Fall in ground where alfalfa or related crops such as bur clover or sweet clover, have not been grown before, will find it advisable to inoculate the soil with the proper kind of nitrogen-fixing bacteria. The same is true of clover peas, or any other legume. The United States Department of Agriculture says there are three principal methods of inoculating soil—by direct application of soil from a field known to have suitable bacteria, by pure culture inoculation, and by the glue method.

For the first, it is well to apply at least 200 pounds of finely sifted inoculated soil per acre. This can be done with the fertilizer attachment of the drill, or broadcasting by hand. Broadcasting will require a larger quantity and should be done in the early morning, late evening, or on a cloudy day to avoid undue exposure to the sun's rays. The field should be immediately harrowed after the broadcasting. Transferring soil from one considerable distance is expensive and subject to the danger of introducing troublesome weeds, insects and plant disease.

An easier method of field soil inoculation which has met with success where only a small amount of inoculated soil is available, is to coat the seed with inoculated soil by means of ordinary furniture glue.

Dissolve two handfuls of glue for every gallon of boiling water and allow the solution to cool. Put the seed in a wash tub and then sprinkle enough of the solution on it to moisten, but not to wet it (1 quart per bushel is sufficient), and stir the mixture thoroughly until all the seed is moistened.

Obtain inoculated soil from a place where the same kind of plants as the seed are growing, making sure that the roots have a vigorous development of nodules. Dry the soil in the shade and pulverize it. Scatter this dust over the moistened seed, using from two to four quarts of dirt for each bushel of seed, mixing thoroughly until the seeds no longer stick together.

Liquid pure cultures are prepared by the Department of Agriculture and are mailed in limited quantities on application, not more than enough for 1 bushel of one kind of seed to any person. They are also sold by private concerns. Complete directions are mailed with each bottle.

KNOWLEDGE COUNTS LARGE MAKING FARM TIMBER

Woodland owners often sell their timber without having a sufficient knowledge of its market value to protect their interests, and suffer loss in consequence. Losses can be avoided only by a careful and thorough study of all available markets. The following steps may be of assistance in acquiring a knowledge of the sale value of timber, says the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Take advantage of the experience of neighbors who have recently sold timber or have otherwise informed themselves in regard to good markets and current prices.

Apply to the State forester, the county agricultural agent, or any other available public official or personal agency for sources of information and advice regarding possible markets and timber prices.
Employ the services of some reliable man who has made a special study of market prices of logs and lumber. The saving gained thereby, unless the owner has had much experience along that line, may amount to from 10 to 40 times the cost of the examination.
Get into touch, through correspondence, with outside buyers and thus awaken competition among as many prospective purchasers as possible. A live effort along this line will often bring about an open market for standing timber.

Determine the value of the material by reference to current market prices and the total cost of putting it on the market.
Additional information concerning the selling of farm timber is contained in Farmers Bulletin 1210, Measuring and Marketing Farm Timber, copies of which may be had free by addressing a request to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Failure of holding of hunters' licenses to countersign the licenses issued to them is classed as a violation of the state game code and will be followed by the arrests where discovered, according to the officers of the state game commission who have just returned from tours of districts. The license is held to be invalid unless signed and prosecutions will be pushed by the state authorities.
