Before the War Prices ON Real Estate

Within the past few days I have listed some "real bargains" in rural real estate, and when I say bargains I mean it.

Here You Are

Another Good One

A 70-acre farm, 50 acres tillable and 20 acres pasture, on state highway adjoining Elizabethtown bore, good house, newly remodeled and very modern barn for 45 head of stock, water in every stall, concrete floors and entries, new silo containing nearly $1,000 worth of feed, new hog sty, shedding for tobacco, wagon shed, large poultry house, slate roofs on nearly all buildings, good water.

In addition to the farm here's what goes with it. Four Head of Horses, from 4 to 8 yrs old. 12 Head of Cows, some registered, 5 Chester White Sows, some with pigs, 1 Boar, 200 Chickens, about 40 Ducks. A large and complete line of farm implements, including 4 wagons, reaper, tobacco planter, harrows, plows, in fact everything. 9,000 tobacco lath. Flies will bear closest inspection. If interested get busy as this proposition can't last long.

DEPLORES FLARING SKY SIGN

London Newspaper Complains of Dazzling Electric Advertisements as Spoiling City's Beauty.
The London Observer ventures to register a good-natured protest against "the terrible affliction of the jazz luminaries" that shout their advertisements from every corner of the London streets when darkness comes. The cumulative effect of these flashing electric signs is as distressing as a "voraciously voraciously" with a megaphone.
The Regent street corner of Piccadilly circus is the habitat of the worst offenders. It is ablaze with flaming braziers, so that it looks like a house on fire. "The galaxy of frenzied lettering gives you the blinks. Leicester square has a green river of tears flowing about a safety razor advertisement."
In Switzerland, the Observer comments, they do things differently—or did, before the war. In Zurich the citizens sit by their swift-flowing Limmat and watch the shimmer of water under the stars or moon, while the venerable outlines of the old minister loom dark against the sky. Paris, indeed, has lost her old-time beguemony as the city of light. That primacy has now passed to New York, with London a close second.
"Some, perhaps, would rather be left to dream of that other Georgian London, haunted by watchmen with distaffs and lanterns, or the Elizabethan one, peopled by gallants with ruff, doublet, jerkin, and smoking torches. The soup trolley food and whisky they prefer to encounter in newspapers, where the mere sight of it does not occasion a kind of visual delirium tremens."—The Living Age.

HAVE NEW IDEA OF MARRIAGE

Public Discussion of the Subject in the Japanese Press is Regarded as Significant.
A series of articles on love and marriage is appearing in Japanese newspapers and magazines, as a sign of the modern tendencies of the Japanese mentality. Professors in psychology, school teachers and writers of note are prominent in the discussion on reforming the old matrimonial system, all advocating more freedom for personal choice.
According to the old custom, the parents chose bride and bridegroom and the marriage was performed without the interested parties having known each other. Marriage was considered a duty towards country and family, the religion of ancestor worship being its principle. The young couples lived with the parents and the bride owned complete obedience to her mother-in-law.
The custom is now prevalent for the young people to meet long before the marriage takes place so that they may know each other and to live apart from the family is no longer considered undutiful. Yft. of late, the tendency appeared to marry for love's sake and out of personal choice. This new and romantic ideal is so strong that all means are tried to obtain it, entailing elopements, suicides and notorious family dissensions. Hence the discussion for greater liberty and more social life, which are quite opposed to the old social system of Confucius, that men and women should keep apart and marry for duty's sake and not for love.

Hard Names to Pronounce.

The new frontier which has been drawn up in Upper Silesia will affect the place names of a number of cities more or less familiar to the American public. Of the larger cities, Ratibor (Kaczibor in Polish), Gliwicz, (Gliwice) and Beuthen (Bytom) will remain their present German names. On the Polish side the place names of the towns which they have all along been known to the Poles by their original Polish names, have for the last two centuries officially borne German names, will now revert to the Polish forms. Thus Konigsbute again is Huta Krolewska, Kattowitz again becomes Katowice, Pless is changed back to Pszczyzna, Tarnowitz will again be Tarawowski Gory, and once more Lublinitz will be known as Lublince. The place name of Rybnik will remain unchanged, the Polish and German forms being identical.
Filtritious Islands.
French grammar is right, for once, when it designates islands as feminine; many of them appear and disappear like a face behind a fan, and have to be wooed fervently before they are won.
Charcot's recent landing on the "lost" island of Rockall, east of the Hebrides, recalls other elusive islands, says the Scientific American. Jan Meyen modestly tells herself in mist, and is seen but once in 50 years, while an islet in the Behring straits surrounnds herself with water so hot that fishermen say approach is impossible. Derwentwater has a bathing nymph of an island that floats for six weeks, then coyly submerges. Lenge, the explorer, made his home on a similar one at the mouth of the Amazon, until the island capsized in an attempt to get rid of her crew.

Jessica Goes to the City

By MALCOLM BROWN
Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Don't go, dear—we shall miss you, oh, so much!"
Kind, gentle Aunt Priscilla placed a pleading hand on the fair golden head of her favorite niece, Jessica, as she spoke. Jessica loved her as everybody else did. She clung to her now, but still she murmured pleadingly:
"I shall miss you, too, dearest aunt, but, oh! I do so want to see what life is like away from this quiet, humdrum village. Cousin Marcia has written me so much about the bright, brilliant life she leads. They have asked me to come so often. Marcia says that Uncle and Aunt Williston feel quite offended at my constant refusal to accept their invitation, so—"
"My poor, wifful child, my dear, innocent lamb!" murmured Aunt Priscilla indulgently. "I will not say another word. I must not forget that youth years for a change."
"I must finish my packing if I expect to catch the train, mustn't I, aunt?" asked Jessica. "And there is dear Robert to say good-by to—"
"Robert had to go out into the country with his father," again interrupted Aunt Priscilla. "He was here with some flowers for you long before you were awake."
"How kind he is, the dear, dear fellow!" murmured Jessica.
Robert Liston, the son of her nearest neighbor, had been a true and loyal knight errant since the summer before. It was he who had built the pretty vine-enclosed bower where Jessica read and did fancy work on pleasant afternoons. It was Robert who had marked out and cultivated a little garden patch that was the delight of everybody who visited it.
It seemed that a day could not pass but that Robert did some thoughtful act in her behalf. They had been in-vious friends. Jessica actually shed one or two tears as she thought of leaving Newton without an opportunity, to say good-by to the best friend she had ever known.
Aunt Priscilla found the forgotten box of flowers and sighed. She loved the frank, handsome, light-hearted youth who had been the life of the place.
All through a month Aunt Priscilla received letters from Jessica. They bubbled over with all the evanescence of a girl whose life had become one constant round of pleasures. Then they became briefer and briefer.
Then there was a whole month during which no word came from the distant niece. At its end, however, there arrived a brief note from Jessica. It read: "There is trouble, I am coming home," and two mornings later Jessica arrived at the pretty little cottage to throw her arms around her aunt's neck and sob out her worries.
"Oh, Aunt Priscilla," she cried, "I never want to go away again! It was grand at first. It was parties, matinees, automobile picnics, but it ended in a crash. A foreign count to be an impostor. One night some of the men drank too much whisky, were offensive to the ladies, and I ended in a disgraceful scene. Then uncle lost all he had on the stock exchange, the creditors seized everything (there was for debt, and—oh, I must see Robert, and the garden!"
The dear old garden! Every blushing bud so carefully nurtured re-proached Jessica as she ran out from the house. She buried her face into a clump of lilies and kissed them fervently, like old dear friends. She went into the bower.
The quaint old conceit drew Jessica to step toward it, to fancy herself back in the sunlit past. It seemed as if her cloudy experience somehow had clouded the pure serenity of those old days. Fairly unconsciously she placed her hand in the hollow. Her fingers touched something. It was a letter. The truth flashed across her—the one that Robert had written her probably the morning she left home, to which her aunt had referred.
Her sweet face flushed crimson as she read the manly avowal of love of her old true friend, the tears came to her eyes as she realized how cruelly she had neglected him.
"If I had found this that morning long ago," she murmured, "I am afraid I would have said, 'Wait, let me see life before I answer.' Now—"
She paused. She pressed her lips to the damp midwived sheet that had held its fond secret so close for so many months.
"Yes, now, dear Jessica?" asked an eager, radiant voice behind her, and she turned to face the writer of the missive.
"Oh, Robert! Robert!" cried Jessica, her hands extended like the winning, wifful child she was, "I have come back to home and peace and—love!"
