POSSIBLY SLIM WAS RIGHT

Come to Think of It, His Inamorata Hardly Displayed the Ardent Love He Had Looked For.

"Funny how a guy makes up his mind to enlist," remarked Slim, the company clerk, to a bunch of his buddies in the barracks. "What made you decide to take the big plunge?" asked a buddy. "It was this way," explained Slim. "I had a little squabble with the girl, and I told her I was going to join the marines. Just to make it sound as if I meant business I wrote a letter to the nearest recruiting station, and before sealing the letter up I let her read it."

"Did she say anything?" asked the buddy.

"Not a word. So I went out and posted the letter. A little later I gets the answer back, saying I could enlist for two, three or four years, and I shows it to the girl. 'There you are,' says I. 'If you don't treat me different from now on, I'll go straight out and enlist for two years.' 'Two years!' Ah, don't be a piker, Slim, why don't you make it four?' 'Come to think of it,' concluded Slim, 'I don't think that Jane was as bughouse about me as I calculated.'—The Leatherneck.

CALLS FOR NERVE AND SKILL

Hunters of the Sword-Fish Find Their Prey Altogether "Worthy of Their Steel."

Sword-fish schooners are the fastest fishing boats under sail in the world. They have to be, for the sword-fish is a fast mover. He, for a fighter, too. Often has he charged a ship and driven his "sword" through her stout planking. When a school of sword-fish is sighted, the spearman goes forward to the end of the bowsprit and gets into the "pulpit," an iron fitting at the end of the spar, where he stands to drive his lance into a fish. The line attached to the spear reaches out of the tub in which it is coiled, and the fish makes off, doubling his speed in a vain effort to escape.

A goodsized fish will often fetch as much as $40; but it is a hard life, and it needs fine seamanship in the chase amid the huge seas of the Atlantic when bad weather prevails. The sword-fish is widely distributed in the ocean, but is most common off the North American coast. Its average length is 7 feet, but some are 12 feet or 15 feet. The "sword" is used to spear its prey, such as cod, tunny and mackerel, and even to attack whales.

ZINC IN PLACE OF STONE

Invention of Recent Date Will Greatly Lessen the Cost of Producing Lithographic Prints.

Because lithograph stone has risen in price some 1,600 per cent, the lithographic industry of Prague, where lithography began, has been threatened with destruction. Two new inventions, by a citizen of Czechoslovakia, however, have now come to the aid of lithography. One of these covers a process which makes possible the use of a plate of zinc or aluminum as a substitute for the lithographic stone. The other invention is a combination of two processes which prolong the life of the stone and simplify the labor of printing.

The method now followed requires a re-grinding of the stone for each new operation, involving a loss of at least one-fourth of a millimeter (about .01 inch) in the thickness of the slab each time. By the new process the grinding is made unnecessary, and the stone is made ready in about five minutes, whereas the re-grinding usually lasts two to three hours.

The complete preparation of the slab for printing requires only 15 minutes. A considerable saving is thus effected in material, time, and labor.

REVEALS QUICKNESS OF MIND

Few Better Tests of the Power of One's Memory Than in Traversing Labyrinth.

Here is the drawing of a labyrinth. It is designed to test your power of memory. Beginning at the center, in the place marked "START," trace out the one path of exit. Time yourself. See how rapidly you learn the correct route. A person with keen memory

A Labyrinth. Test Your Mind on it should learn in a few minutes. A dull mind may require a much longer time.

Mazes such as this, constructed in the form of passages, are used to test the powers of place memory in animals. A rat's place memory equals or exceeds that of man. Dogs are nearly his equal, but turtles, snakes, and birds are decidedly inferior.—Chicago Tribune.

Pig Mothered by Sheep.

A New Zealand reader sends to a magazine the following story: A drove of sheep attracted some attention in Etham, N. Z., because a small pig was in their company. One of the ewes whilst on the run had lost her lamb. About the same time a little wild pig lost its mother. The ewe and the pig fraternized. The latter leaving the bush and accepting the ewe as its foster mother. After the sheep had been shorn the pig had no difficulty in recognizing its foster mother. Then the sheep were herded and driven into Etham for sale. The pig remained close by its foster mother during the three days' journey to town.

Horse Ate Way to Safety.

A farmer in Saskatchewan, one morning, found his straw stack had collapsed during the night, and that an old horse was missing. He concluded that the animal was dead under the straw. A week later a man passing the straw pile saw the old horse's hoofs sticking out and saw them move. The straw was immediately cleared away and it was found that the old horse had made a tunnel through which he could get air and eat the straw. Although the animal was a whole week without water, he is none the worse for his adventure.

Aristocrats Seek Positions.

The wife of a banker advertised last month in a Munich newspaper for a good educated woman secretary, able to speak three languages; wages $90 a week (Swiss money). She has already received more than 1,000 replies, the applicants including three princesses, nine baronesses, and thirty countesses.

The Attraction.

"The congregation seemed unusually attentive this morning," remarked the pastor. "Don't flatter yourself that your sermon had anything to do with it," replied his wife. "Two of the ladies in the choir were wearing new hats!" —Judge.

The inclement weather has handicapped the farmers with their wheat is all set with his new self feeding straw baler and threshing rig for the large farm of Chas. Riceford as soon as the weather permits.

Elmer Groff farmer of this place took a touring car filled with fire fighters to the Harry Rich fire last Thursday evening, June 29, near Marietta during the electrical storm. He claims there were fully two hundred machines parked in the vicinity of the fire.

The Rheems fire company held their annual meeting on Monday evening. Important business was transacted. The festival committee turned over the proceeds to the amount of two hundred dollars which was ordered to be placed so as to earn four per cent.

P. R. R. officials special train enroute to Chicago, Ill. one day last week, while running 60 miles per hour through the Rheems cut, the main driving rod dropped to the ground scattering stones in all directions breaking many windows in the first coach. Following trains used the Eastward track to pass the disabled engine. Harrisburg wreckers removed the engine. Special engine that was waiting at Harrisburg came to this place for the delayed train.

The Bello-Pacifist.

"H. G. Wells is known in Europe as a bello-pacifist, and truly his recent peace articles have stirred up a lot of bitterness and strife."

The speaker was Stephen Lauzanne, the French publicist. He went on: "Wells reminds me of the cantankerous individual who was about to be married. When he came to the church on the wedding morning he warned the minister beforehand that he didn't want any fuss."

"He consented, however, to station himself in due form at the flower-decked altar, but as the minister proceeded with the ritual he got more and more impatient. Finally, when he was asked if he, Henry, did take this woman, Jane, to be his lawful wedded wife and so on, he gave a snort before the question was half through, and then turned to the congregation and said in a loud, jeering voice: "Well, I guess I came here with that intention!"

They Never Did.

My most embarrassing moment occurred while dramatizing a Christmas play. I had the part of the mother of a large family presiding at the feast on Christmas day. It fell to me to carve the goose. Having rehearsed this part, I was anticipating no difficulty, so I started bravely out on the breast bone. Gently and slowly it slipped out of my grasp. I tried again with the same effect. As the titers from the audience increased, I became slightly confused.

At this opportune moment the father, sitting opposite, uttered his next lines, which were: "Did you ever see such a goose?"

With that the audience began to roar, and I gave it up in ignominious defeat.—Exchange.
