SCORE ONE MORE FOR NAVY

Damaged Replica of Old Vessel, It Is Believed, Can Be Repaired by Sailors.

Percy C. Madeira, Philadelphia coal magnate, has joined the ranks of those who have taken up the fad of collecting ship models.

The model, with all masts and other spars in place and with rigging, blocks, boats, etc., as they should be, was a handsome picture when it was packed for shipment at Nantucket.

But when the fragile model reached Madeira's home it came out of the packing case nearly wrecked. It had been poorly packed and roughly handled on the trip.

He reckoned, however, without the United States navy. He happened to tell his troubles to a naval officer stationed at League Island and soon afterward the officer rang the coal magnate up and said he thought he had a man who could repair the wreck.

WANTED—Every family in this entire community to subscribe for the Bulletin and in that way keep posted on the news of the day.
