MEMORY THAT IS MARVELOUS

Authentic Feats of Blind Musicians Are Among the Most Remarkable on Record.
Remarkable feats of quick memorizing by blind musicians have been recorded by the National Institute for the Blind.
Fred Turner, one of the most accomplished blind musicians in Scotland, recently memorized all of Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" and in four months trained his choir and accompanied the entire work on the organ, while Sinclair Logan, a blind composer and organist, memorized Somerville's "The Passion of Christ," a fairly complicated cantata occupying 75 minutes in performance—trained his choir and accompanied a highly successful performance in less than two months, during which he was working under the stress of other heavy memorization work for an important recital in Liverpool for the National Institute for the Blind. In addition to his normal professional duties.

To carry in the memory Beethoven's 32 pianoforte sonatas, as William Wolstenholme does, and the entire 48 preludes and fugues of Bach, as in the case of H. V. Spammer—two blind musicians resident in London, would seem no light achievement, and yet these men do it. A small portion of the range of works in the mental storehouse of these men—Westminster Gazette.

Laborers in America who think they have a hard life, should see these Chinese coolies. Imagine wheeling a barrow with a four or five hundred pound load for hundreds of miles over roads difficult to travel even on horseback!
Usually there are two men to a barrow. The one at the handles, by means of a strap over his shoulders, takes much of the weight from his arms, leaving his hands more or less free to guide and balance the load; the one in front drags it forward with a ten-foot rope.
Painting and straining, with the sweat streaming from their half-naked bodies; pulling through foot-deep yellow dust, lifting over rocks and dragging up hills; at night gulping a bowl of soup or macaroni and half dead with fatigue, falling asleep on the ground in the inn courtyard among the pigs, chickens and mules—so they live, day after day, year in and year out, with nothing else to look forward to.

All this for fifty or sixty coppers a day, or about eighteen cents in American money. Is it any wonder they seek oblivion in opium?—Roy Chapman Andrews in Asia.

BRACELET WATCHES FOR GIVEABLES
A few years ago, while the French Social Whirl was at its height at Deauville, Mrs. Poiret appeared wearing a watch upon her bracelet.
The Watch Bracelet created a furore among the fastidious French, and the vogue swiftly swept across the Channel to England.
After that, it was only a matter of time before it crossed the Atlantic, to be taken up by smartly-dressed women everywhere.
There was a time when we were amazed at the sight of a watch upon a woman's wrist. Today it amazes us not to see one there.
We are showing any number of them now, with the added feature that the watch can be detached and worn separately as a chateleine or as a pendant.
The prices start as low as $15.00.
