HOW RATS CARRY AN EGG

This May Be Answer to Long-Disputed Question, and It Is Certainly Ingenious.

It remained for a retired ship captain to dispute all previous answers to the moot question, How does a rat carry a hen's egg without breaking it? George Gaze, 1821 Whompa avenue, who observed the depositions of rats during many years' service before the mast, comes to bat: "It's all very well for these nature fakery to say the rats use a wheelbarrow system, but what do the rats do when they come to a flight of stairs and wish to carry the egg down? "That ought to stump these fake naturalists. But I can answer it. Two rats work together in an egg raid.

Showing Rats' Ingenuity.

When they come to the top of the stairs they lie down, with one's head to the other's feet.

"Then each wraps his tail around the other rat's head. Not having yet eaten the egg, their stomachs are naturally sort of concave. Into this space between the bodies the egg is slipped. Then the rats roll down stairs with the egg completely protected."

A convincing reply, but there may be other means devised by rats.—Chicago Herald-Examiner.

Seedless Apples Arrives.

Seedless apples are said to be growing on a tree in Piney Grove, Del. The tree is seven years old, and has just completed the blossoming stage. The owner expects to pick from it upward of six baskets of fruit if storms do not beat the apples from the tree. The tree bears red fruit of uniform size and in appearance not unlike other kinds of apples. The interior of the fruit is much like an orange, having a stringy character, but with no core, and the apple is without seeds and seed cells.

Bees Used the Ferry.

A party of fishermen from White Bridge, Windham, Maine, were unwilling ferryman to a swarm of bees on Sebago lake. The men were crossing the lake when a swarm of bees settled in the bottom of the boat. They did not interfere with the corners, although they were not exactly welcome. The boat continued on its voyage and on reaching its destination the bees left as suddenly as they had boarded the craft.

Father Transmitted Immunity?

There is a settler at the Don, north Queensland, who was bitten by a death adder a couple of months after his marriage, but survived. Four years later his first born trod on an adder, which bit him on the calf of the leg. The child was hurried into Bowen, but on arrival at the hospital showed not the slightest symptoms of snakebite. It looks as though immunity was transmitted through the father's blood.

Fisherman Has New One.

A very fishy story comes from Middletown, N. Y. A resident of that town reports that while on the Wallkill river the other night a large bass suddenly leaped from the water into the boat. The boatman was snaking a cigarette at the time and he says he thinks the fish mistook the light for a firefly. Similar occurrences have often been reported of the leaping Guan aniche.—New York Sun.

THAT MIGHT ACCOUNT FOR IT

Anyway, Badgered Witness Gave Pompous Magistrate Something to Think About for a Moment.

An illiterate man was in the witness box, and the pompous magistrate sought to improve the occasion while emphasizing his own superiority. "What! Unable to read or write?" he said, sternly. "And with all the advantages for education that are provided by modern civilization! You have had equal opportunities with myself, for instance, but your neglect of them would quite unfit you to sit in my place. How is it that I have become a public man and a magistrate, while you lack even the rudiments of education?"

The worm turned. "Well," he replied, "I suppose it is because you wasn't so smart as me in dodging the school-attendance officer."

FRANKIE QUITE UP TO DATE

No Reason at All Why Conversation Needed to Be Guarded in the Youth's Presence.

Such a generation! There go the little flappers, innocently indifferent to the talk which they have caused. Watch the sweet barbarians, all at play, and admit that the ages have not seen their equal. As Tiny Tim didn't say, "God bless 'em, every one."

It is, indeed, a wonderful age in which we live, as every age before was wonderful in its time, and as every age will be, thank heaven. It was Lucretius who first told of the old plowman, gazing forlornly over the land, and sighing for a return of the "old days."

There is a woman in this town who does not belong to the tribe of sighing plowmen. She believes that life is good, and not wicked. She is free, that is all, refusing to be held down by the old oppressions and inhibitions. She has a little boy just about old enough to talk.

The other day, at a function she was giving, something went wrong. It was a slight thing, but enough to irritate her.

Ladies of the old school would have expressed vexation.

"This modern lady—and she is such in the best sense of the term "gentlewoman"—used a plain epithet.

"Oh, you shouldn't use such words before little Frankie," a woman friend laughed.

"Oh, he can swear," the mother said, calmly. "Say 'D—n' for the lady, honey."—Washington Star.

GOING UP

"Talk is cheap." "Going up, I fear. Seems to be a general tendency to boost telephone rates all over the country."

The Clover Leaf Unlucky.

Four-leaf clovers are not always as lucky as they are reported to be. A golfer was disqualified at the 37th hole in the finals of the northern California professional golf tournament in Delmonte, when he picked a four-leaf clover and then brushed the line of putt with his hand. It was the only disqualification in many years in an important match, but was according to a well-known rule about removing anything from the fairway.

Probably Will Be Trouble.

An Oregon rancher says that he has found a quail mothering two Plymouth Rock chickens, whose mother was sitting on a nest of native pheasant eggs. The quail and the hen were found in the woods near the rancher's home. The rancher was unable to determine just what had caused the domestic mixup of wild and tame fowl. He predicted that the "mothers" would find life somewhat complicated after a few weeks.

Duckling Hatched Without Eyes.

Still another story of a freak duckling comes from Manitoba. A correspondent of a Canadian newspaper says that three weeks ago a duckling, without eyes, was hatched. It is normal in every other respect, eating and drinking without having to be fed.

Horse Had Hump When Foaled.

An old horse has just died in Saskatchewan that had a hump on its back like a camel. Twenty years ago the colt was born with a hump, but the owner intended at first to kill it, but changed his mind and the animal has worked faithfully for 15 years.

Let Me List It

The fall season will soon be here and any person having real estate to dispose of should notify me by phone or card. I will list it free, advertise same and if not sold this work costs you nothing. What could be fairer? No matter where you're located, call phone or write. Jno. E. Schroll, Realtor, Mt. Joy.

It has been learned that S. A. Clark, the Sadsburyville postmaster who committed suicide, is $2,600 short in his accounts.
