Writer Asserts Cause Is Natural Craving for Meat Where There Is a Scant Supply.

Why does man became a cannibal? Mr. W. D. M. Bell, a contributor to "Country Life," thinks that the cause is constant craving for meat in a land where mostly grain abounds. He tells some interesting things about the ex traordinary diet of the natives of the Bahr Aouk in Africa.

When they inhabit a stockless area, he says, they go for months without flesh, except of course for an occasional rat, mongoose or bird. In those circumstances the craving for meat naturally becomes intense and in my opinion is the cause of cannibalism.

When the people suddenly have almost unlimited meat, as they do have when they kill an elephant or a hippopotamus, they simply gorge them selves. A man will eat from fifteen to twenty pounds in twenty-four hours. All night long he will eat and doze and doze again. As a result his skin turns a peculiar dull color, and his eyes be come yellow. On the third day he has completely recovered his natural ap pearance and is again full of energy In a short time he wants his grain food again and if he has the choice will eat a large portion of grain to a small portion of meat.

If, as with the clephant, there is much fat with the meat, the natives are likely to become extremely fit on that diet. For example, for sixtythree days of consecutive marching a kilangozi, or head porter, of mine who was of slight build carried his mat, his blanket, fifteen pounds of rations and a tusk that weighed one hundred and forty-eight pounds! The shortest day was five hours, and some days were very long indeed. For rations throughout the march he had two pounds of native grain every day and as much meat and elephant fat as he cared for. His physical condition was magnificent throughout.-From the Youth's Companion.

LAMENTS CHANGE IN FASHION

Captain Dingle Says Paris Dress Craze Has Hit South Sea Island Femininity, Too.

Capt. Charles Dingle of the freighter Bay Port, which arrived in Port Newark from Hawaii and the South Sea islands, brought a dismal tale of the ravages of fashion in those once guileless and innocent regions. the Paris-born craze for long skirts, says Cap'n Dingle and his crew, that has sophisticated the spicy isles.

"They're wearin' them straw dresses all right," explained Skip Slattery, first assistant chief engineer of the freighter, "but they're wearin' 'em like a wine bottle useta be-from neck to heels, you might say. Then they got a new-style petticoat made o' moss. Oh, it ain't like what it used Even Lucky Bill Fanning, optimist that he is, joined in the threnody. It was enough to make an old-time sailorman shed tears, he said, to see the girls all wadded up in straw and moss like that. Why, he could remember when putting in at some of those islands was better than a Fourteenth street burlesque, but now it was duller than Teaneck .- New York Tribune.

There is much curiosity and anxiety to know what has become of the famous Codex Sinaiticus, which was, before the Russian revolution, in the Imperial library at Petrograd. This most ancient manuscript of the Bible was discovered in the monastery of St. Catherin, on Mount Sinai, whence its name, and was acquired by Tsar Alexander II in 1869. What has become of this precious document during the Russian revolution?

tion would be an irreparable act, even though there is another similar document, known as the "Vaticanus," an Christ" illustrated, showing the scenuncial manuscript of the Fourth cen- es from his birth to his entrance inthe same monastery.

Economic Error. New Jersey's forests are being burned up at the rate of 70,000 acres a year, which means not only that her area of growing forests is being reduced annually to that extent, but that land which should become a public asset of great value is being converted into a public liability of unsightly and embarrassing proportions. There are 2,000,000 acres of forest land in New Jersey almost within trucking distance of the greatest lumber market in the world, according to the estimate of the American Forestry association, which offers the opinion that sooner or later the people of the state of New Jersey will awaken to the economic significance of the fact, but that the awakening may come toc late.-Thrift Magazine.

When Merchants Coined Own Money. The action of the German government in allowing certain firms to print their own money in small denominations recalls a somewhat similar state of affairs in the early years of George III in England.

In those days the amount of copper coin in circulation was inadequate, and tradesmen all over the country issued tokens of their own which attained almost equal standing with the regal coinage. One manufacturer in Birmingham issued over 9,000,000 pennies and 3,500,000 half-pennies in the course of a few years and the amount of "tokens" in circulation in 1780 outnumbered the genuine coinage.
