FORM SEWING CLASS AT LINCOLN SCHOOL

A sewing class was organized at the Lincoln schoolhouse, Rapho Twp., when ten girls enrolled. These are: Ruth Erb, Ruth Witmer, Helen Rohrer, Esther Rohrer, Elsie Weidman, Katie Dresler, from Lincoln district, and Anna Nissley, from Sporting Hill district.

The class is taking three courses of five lessons each and when completed will have some real results to show.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday, June 9, at 1:30 P. M. New members will have an opportunity of joining the class at this meeting. All girls ten years of age or over are admitted.

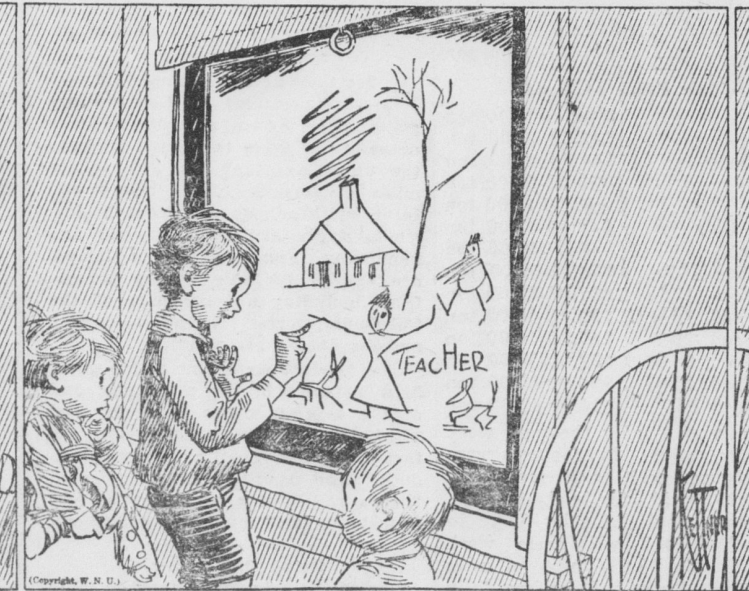

Miss Anne Forbes, of the State College Extension Service, is in charge. The work is carrying out modern ideas of education. It means a training that is of practical value to the pupils. All girls of the designated age should take advantage of this opportunity.

Who Wants This Job?
Having recently installed another linotype we are in need of another lady to learn to operate it. We prefer a person with high school knowledge. If you want a steady position at good wages call at this office. tf

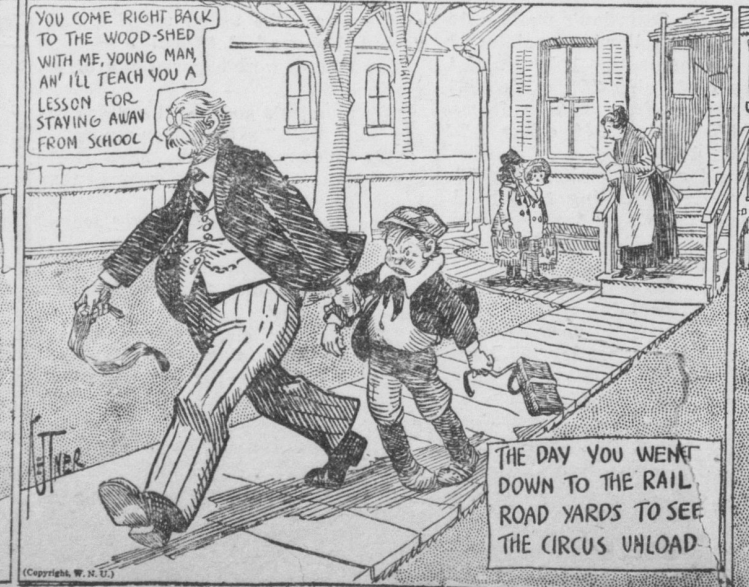

Next Meeting June 10
The next meeting of the Men's Federation will be held Sunday, June 10, in the Lutheran church.

The Mistake of Nurse Phyllis

By CLARA DELAFIELD
(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union)

Nurse Phyllis was sure that Doctor Parkes, the house surgeon, loved her. That was according to the tradition, and Nurse Phyllis was the latest acquisition of the North Manhattan hospital. She had become a probationer after a long and not very successful career as a stenographer.

Nurse Phyllis was twenty-eight. Is that too old for romance? Nurse Phyllis was romantic.

She loved Doctor Parkes, and hated Nurse Marian, who was trying to take him away from her.

If Doctor Parkes seldom spoke to her, Nurse Phyllis knew that the reason was his constancy, his fear of his love being unreciprocated. The hospital was harder work than Myers & Co., but oh, how much pleasanter than the office, especially with Doctor Parkes in mind.

"Come back when you want a job," old Myers had told her.

"What a job!" Nurse Phyllis was devoted to her work. Even when off duty she would steal into the wards to lay her calm hand on the fevered brow of some restless sufferer.

There was little Billy, a boy like an angel, who had been run over. Nurse Phyllis sat beside him for nearly half an hour while he tossed restlessly in his delirium.

"Nurse, I wish you'd keep out of the ward when you're off duty," said Nurse Marian crossly. "That kid Billy didn't have a chance to sleep last night, with you fussing about him."

"Cat!" thought Nurse Phyllis. She knew that Nurse Marian was mad with jealousy about Doctor Parkes.

The climax came in the case of young Mr. Alonzo Kent. Young Mr. Kent was the victim of an auto accident. He was also the victim of dipomania—self-induced. Young Mr. Kent's father was one of the Wall street crowd.

Oh, to redeem that still innocent-looking boy from dissipation! Nurse Phyllis sat by his side, smoothing his fevered brow—why do fevered brows require smoothing?—and laying her cool palm upon his forehead—which really amounts to the same thing.

Young Mr. Kent tossed on his bed of pain. He opened his eyes.

"Oh, Lord, I've got such a head!" he groaned.

Nurse Phyllis sped lightly across the room—to the cupboard where the medicines were kept. A little alcohol upon young Mr. Kent's forehead would soothe him with its cool application. She snatched up a bottle and let the contents flow upon her handkerchief, which smelled delicately of lilac. She hurried back to young Mr. Kent's bed, which was in a screened-off corner of the ward. Young Mr. Kent had been brought in on an emergency, and there was no vacant room to be allotted him.

Young Mr. Kent lay groaning, his eyes wide open, staring into the unseen.

Nurse Phyllis laid a cool hand upon his brow. "Poor boy!" she said, applying the handkerchief. The liquid trickled down young Mr. Kent's forehead, down the corners of his nose.

Young Mr. Kent sat up with dandibellows that startled every occupant of the ward. The words that flowed from young Mr. Kent's lips were horrible. In the midst of her piteous sympathy, Nurse Phyllis shuddered.

"My poor boy—" she began.

Nurse Marian came hurrying up. "Nurse Phyllis!" she cried. "I must ask you—what have you been doing to that poor boy on the bed?"

"She'd killed me, d—n her!" young Mr. Kent bellowed, screwing up his eyes.

"Nurse Phyllis, I must ask you to get out of this ward immediately!" said Marian.

Nurse Phyllis, casting her a look of complete indifference, obeyed. After all, Nurse Marian could not help her limitations. She was always jealous of everybody.

Nurse Phyllis heard a bell ring. The house surgeon came hurrying into the ward. Involuntarily Nurse Phyllis flattened against the wall outside.

Young Mr. Kent was groaning. Nurse Marian was talking excitedly. "That's the limit, doctor!" she cried notly. "Benzine—and in his eyes poor boy!"

Nurse Phyllis gasped. Had she made a mistake?

"That woman's the limit!" said Doctor Parkes angrily. "She's a nuisance, the way she's always nosing about. I can't stand her here any more."

But that was too much. With a strangled sob Nurse Phyllis fled, tearing off the tangles of her job as she ran. And in her mind one sentence rang—thru of old Myers.

"Come back when you want a job," old Myers had said.

She was done with the treachery and hypocrisy of life. She was done with Doctor Parkes. Something in her mind said, "Click, click, click—I guess this ribbon's good for one more turn."

LARGE BARN BURNED BY EARLY MORNING BLAZE

The large frame bank barn on North Barbara street, near the northern boro limits, the property of W. B. Detwiler, was completely destroyed by fire of an unknown origin at an early hour Friday morning.

The fire was discovered by Dr. E. W. Newcomer, who turned in the alarm. The siren sounded at 3:30 A. M. The firemen responded immediately but when they arrived the entire structure was enveloped in flames and was completely destroyed, together with its contents which included some corn fodder and a lot of lumber.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. The loss will be about $1,500, partially covered by insurance.

A SURPRISE PARTY FOR MISS MARTHA WENTZ

A birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Wentz, on Monday evening, in honor of their daughter Marthens Wentz, who celebrated her nineteenth birthday anniversary. The celebrant was presented with a birthday cake, which was decorated with nineteen candles. Miss Wentz received many beautiful gifts. Music and games were played and a most delightful evening was enjoyed by all who were present. Dinner was served to the following guests: Marthens Wentz, Lena Dillinger, Margaret Gladfelter, Helen and Dorothy Musselman, Ruth Kaley, Anna Hoffman, Mildred Kottler, Flo Smith, Dallis Coolidge, Esther and Edna George, Olive Smith, Helen, Lena, Sarah and Evelyn Wentz, Mr. and Mrs. David Wentz.

Called to Penbrook
Mrs. Ruth Kohr, of Conoy township, was called to Penbrook on account of the death of her granddaughter, Miss Lucy Rudy, who died from diphtheria after a short illness.
