A Beautiful Stucco Cottage at Private Sale

Here's one of the best and most modern dwellings I have to offer. Six Acres and 19 Perches of Limestone Land adjoining the borough limits of Mount Joy. Thereon is a very modern Stucco Cottage, with 7 rooms and bath, vapor vacuum heat, electric lights, spring water, very beautiful lawn with evergreens, shrubbery, hedge, etc. Also Eleven Modern Poultry Houses, one of which is 18x50 with concrete basement, good garage, 75 bearing fruit trees, etc.
 Tract has a frontage of 500 feet and would make an ideal place for at least four modern homes. Not a thing about the place that isn't right. Will bear closest inspection.
 Not far from trolley or Penna. R. R. station. Would make a wonderful suburban home for city folks or an ideal place for some retired family.
 Don't phone or write but come and see it. Best of reasons for its sale. Can give possession within a week. Do want to sell it quick, so if interested, make it snappy. Quite a concession on price.

TWO-YEAR AG. COURSE AT STATE COLLEGE POPULAR
 "One of Penn State's best mediums of service to Pennsylvania agriculture," is a thought frequently expressed by President John M. Thomas, of the Pennsylvania State College, in speaking of the Two-Year course in agriculture offered by the institution. To date there are over fifty applicants for the quota allowed, with room for a small additional number, says R. G. Brisler, who is in charge.
 "This course is maintained for the benefit of young men who can not take the four-year course because of the lack of high grade preparation required of four-year students," Professor Brisler says. "Any young man, eighteen years of age or over, who does not have the time or money to prepare for the long course, but who desires to fit himself for successful farming will find the two-year course very beneficial."

LANCASTER CO. FARMERS KNOW VALUE OF GRADING

Lancaster county farmers, among the first to fully appreciate the value of grading in marketing their wheat output, have recently had installed in their local farm bureau office a complete grain grading outfit by means of which they plan to make more money on their wheat.
 The machine is similar to the equipment found in federal testing and grading stations and will be used to supply an accurate grading service to farmers, millers and dealers in Lancaster county. First lessons in the operation of the machine and the principles of correct grading were given to the county agent and other farm bureau officials by Geo. A. Stuart, a former Federal inspector, now with the Bureau of Markets of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.
 The farmers are rapidly learning the art and value of proper wheat grading. As was pointed out to them by Mr. Stuart, a large percentage of Pennsylvania wheat shipped to the terminal markets is consigned to the lower grades, principally because of a lack of care and little or no knowledge of grading value at shipping points. Much of this wheat, if given proper attention before shipping, would rate in the top grades. From the many samples sent in to be graded, County Agent F. S. Bucher has already determined a number of wheat growing factors which must be corrected in Lancaster county to increase the profits from the crop.

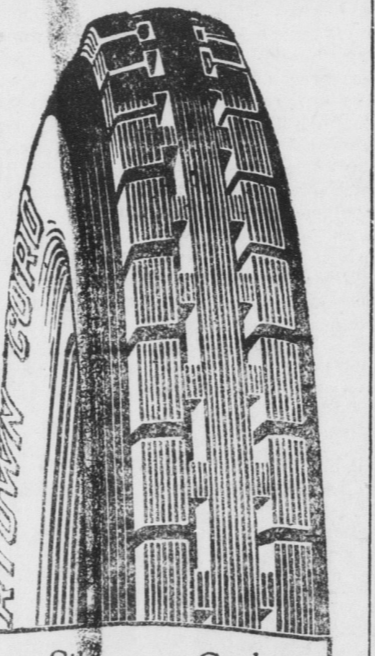

BIG FOOTBALL GAMES AT STATE COLLEGE

Preparations are being made for the handling of record breaking crowds at State College this fall on the occasions of feature football games with the Navy and Georgia Tech. The former will be played on October 20, Alumni Home-Coming Day, and the latter on November 10. These are probably the greatest football attractions ever scheduled for Central Pennsylvania. New stands that are now nearly completed will seat at least 17,000 people.

The completed schedule for this fall is as follows: Sept. 29, Lebanon Valley at State College; Oct. 6 North Carolina, at State College; Oct. 13 Gettysburg, at State College; Oct. 20, Navy, at State College; Oct. 27, West Virginia, at New York; Nov. 3, Syracuse, at Syracuse; Nov. 10, Georgia Tech, at State College; Nov. 17, Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia; Nov. 29, (Thanksgiving- Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh.
 The Freshman schedule: Oct. 13, Carnegie Tech Fresh, at State College; Oct. 20, Kiski, at State College; Nov. 3, Syracuse Fresh, at State College; Nov. 10, Pitt Fresh, at Pittsburgh; Nov. 17, West Virginia Fresh, at State College; Nov. 24, Penn Fresh, at Philadelphia.

Sowing Wheat
 Don't be in too big a hurry to sow the wheat. Extension specialists at State College urge wheat growers to avoid losses from the Hessian fly by postponing seeding until after the fly-free date which can be obtained from the County Agent.

EAST DONEGAL MAN A FRIEND OF HARDING

 G. Harding, then United States Senator from Ohio, was just slain Warren to the days on Marion's Main street.

He'd give a cigarette to Joe and then they'd talk over the prospects of the team for the season. For after the Senate sessions ended for the summer Warren G. would come back to the old home town, and when not looking after the interests of his paper he'd be out there at the ball field rooting for the home team.
 When Joe Rutherford—who, because of family objections, played under the name of Lewis—managed Marion in 1911 they had a team in the Ohio town that received and deserved wonderful support from the fans.

Wilbur Cooper on Team
 His real star, his ace in the hole, was no less than Wilbur Cooper, these past 10 years a bright star in the bright league firmament. Sold to Indianapolis that same season 1911, for $700, Pittsburgh bought him the following spring for $10,000. Indeed, when the war was on between organized ball and the Feds, Wilbur is reputed to have earned his purchase price in annual salary.
 Cooper, still the Pirates' star and one of the best left-handers in the National League, lost a good friend too, when Warren Harding passed away.

Then don't forget there was a Philadelphia boy on that Marion team—handsome Eddie Meehan. But let his boss talk for him, so here's what Joe Rutherford has to say: "Eddie Meehan was one of the fastest running men we had in the Ohio State League. His record on 63 bases stolen during the 1910 season was eloquent evidence of his work on the bases, and always you'd hear the fans saying, 'How'd that man get on third?' Eddie was drafted by the New York Nationals at close of 1910 season, but we needed him as our captain. Consequently McGraw, who held out no positive promise of retaining Meehan, permitted him to come back with for the 1911 season, and he sure made good."
 "As to our late President, Warren G. Harding, there never was a more lovable man lived. He was always so courteous, so kind, and whenever I would suggest a town meeting to stir up interest before an important series, he would not only dig down in his pocket, but appear in person and speak in baseball's behalf. Bear in mind, it's been during the past decade that baseball has dignified itself by adding better and better classes of fans. President Harding was the man who helped put baseball on the map in Marion.

Marion Had Fine Team
 "Marion has consistently boasted of a fine ball team, and nothing in the world was such a big factor as Warren Harding's fast friendship and support for what is America's greatest sport. Baseball gained great prestige from him and in his death lost a loyal fan."
 But what Joe Rutherford hasn't told you is that in the evenings when the boys gathered around the cigar store on Marion's principal thoroughfare, there, like as not, you'd find Warren Harding ready to pat this or that player on the back for a particularly smart play he pulled off that afternoon on the field. Always inspiring, ever ready to impart that intangible yet valuable human touch to the boys, an electric spark which fired them with enthusiasm for their next day's work.
 Had he never been President of these great United States his kindly treatment to those baseball players in times when they were facing the acid test, when the best people were beginning to turn out for ball, will never be forgotten. Plain Warren Harding, that's what he was to those Marion players. And here's the greatest tribute of all. Joe Rutherford needed only to have taken a trip to Washington, said a word to Brigadier General Sawyer, would have been admitted to the President and undoubtedly a fine Government position would have been his portion.
 But Joe's not that sort. As he put it: "Never would I have permitted my friendship to be used as an instrument, a wedge. When I went to Washington—and I had planned to go—it was to be a call for old time's sake, and to think I can never be made now. Well, Warren G. Harding was my true friend and that knowledge will be treasured all through my life."

WIDE ACRE COVERED LAST YEAR IN BARBERY SCOUTING
 An area equivalent to 200 counties was covered during the last fiscal year in the farm-to-farm survey for barberry bushes. This is one step in the fight against wheat rust which is being carried on by the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation with State agricultural colleges, State departments of agriculture, and the Conference for the Prevention of Grain Rust. The work consisted of a survey and a resurvey for sprouting bushes and seedlings. It was carried on in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Wyoming. In all, 740,855 bushes were removed from 6,790 properties in the preliminary survey while 66,670 sprouting bushes and 9,138 seedlings were destroyed in the follow-up campaign.

Since the beginning of the barberry eradication work in 1918 practically all cities and villages of the thirteen States within the quarantine area have been surveyed. In the original farm-to-farm survey an area equivalent to 484 counties has been covered, including 39 counties survey on funds furnished by States. In the five years a total of 5,234,946 bushes and seedlings have been destroyed on 58,610 properties.
