DEMAND ANALYSIS BEFORE BUYING SEED, SAYS GRESS

"Not all farmers are availing themselves of the protection offered them in Pennsylvania's pure seed says State Botanist E. M. Gress who handles all complaints received by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture from those who have bought seed which has been found unsatisfactory.
"All the farmer needs to do when he is making his purchase of seed," says Dr. Gress, "is to demand that he be furnished with a complete analysis of the seed. He can then decide whether the seed will meet his requirements and if he buys he has something definite upon which to base a claim against the seedman should the seed fall short of expectations. Without this statement of analysis from the seed dealer, the farmer has little hope for redress."

For a small fee, paid in advance, the Bureau of Plant Industry of the State Department of Agriculture will analyze a sample of the seed purchased, which analysis the farmer can check against that furnished by the seedman. If he finds by this check that the latter has defrauded him or has in any way violated the State Seed Law, he has data upon which action can be taken against the Farmers must of necessity learn that "poor seeds are dear at any price." If the dealers are confront-If the dealers are confronted with more critical buyers who decline to accept cheap or inferior seeds, the sale of any but the better grades will be discouraged and discontinued, seeds will be produced under more favorable conditions and they will be guaranteed as to germination and freedom from excessive admixtures of noxious weed seeds.

AGAINST RAT PRODUCTION

ing a discovery at State College that a single rat will eat between 13 and 14 pounds of feed in a year, farmers in many communities are waging a battle to get rid of these thieves. The Wayne County Farm Bureau is offering a prize to the man who turns in the largest number of rat tails at the end of the year. One poultry farm reports a casualty list of 277 rats last year. The manager figures that by destroying these pests he cut down his feed bill at least $250. In addition to consuming great quantities of grain, the rodents have a habit of enjoying a feast on young chickens at regular intervals.

The rate of multiplication of the rat population is astounding. It has been found by experimentation that a single rat may produce more than 50 offspring in a single year. Traps poisoned food, cats, dogs, and guns are all instruments of war that are employed in the battle against the pest. Poison food is a dangerous method, especially on a poultry farm
