WEEKLY LETTER WRITTEN EX-PRESSLY FOR THE BULLETIN BY DR. DAVID H. REEDER

THE HAIR: The hair is a very remarkable structure as seen under the microscope, however ordinary or plain it may appear to the naked

In its magnified form, you see what appears to be the trunk of a tree, with an outer bark covered with scales overlapping each other like those on a fish. (This outer layer is known as the cuticle). Next there is an inner bark compound of fibre and cells (the Cortex), and in the center is a soft substance, corresponding to the pith of a tree (the medulla). To the Cortex, or middle section, the hair-like the tree-owes its strength and elasticity and color, as it contains the coloring pigment. The nearer to flatness a hair is, the more curly it will be. Considerable may be learned of the condition of the hair and its needs by means of the microscope. The follicle is the tube or sheath imbedded in the skin, in which the hair grows. At the base of each hair is a small bulb, through which it draws its nourishment. This is known as the papilla or nipple. This small bulb contains an artery, supplying blood for the maintenance of the hair. Each follicle is supplied with from two to six oil glands, oft and glossy. The supply of oil, if too little, causes the hair to become dry and harsh, if too great the hair is matted with grease and accumulates dirt and produces dandruff if not carefully treated.

which furnish oil to keep the hair

The papilla will continue to produce new hair as the present ones grow old and fall out.

Each hair having a certain period of growth and life, the papilla itself is often destroyed and replaced with another and it sometimes undergoes periods of inactivity. The hair fall-J. N. 1, the law requiring that thirty day's notice be given of any change.

For the last several months the Company has not entirely earned the dividend on its common stock, and there is no prospect that it will be able to correct this situation in the future unless its revenues are increased.

The present rates have been in effect since 1920. At that time I was unless under the compound and it brought things right, and I was ingood shape before I became a mother again.
