Again the holy Easter Tido comes from the lands afar Where blooms the gentle ily in the light of Judah's Star, Where Kedron through the cedars flows as sweetly as a seng, And meen 'ries that are dear to all do reverently throng; It breathes again its blessing from the fields where long age he saw the matchless flowers in their prisite brauty blow, And the Easter bells have voices as they musically ring. And the Easter tells have voices as they musically ring.

And the earth retells the story of its Bverlasting King.

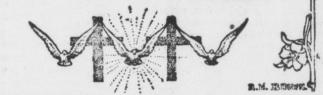

"He is risen! He is risen !" speak the bells of every clime, "He is free from death's dark prison ; He hath thiumphed over crime ;"" Earth rejoices as the anthems from the altars soar on high Till the chorus of the millions is re-echoed in the sky; Aye, the holy Easter carols come across the sunlit sea With a glory and a beauty all unknown to you and me, Where He trod the paths of sorrow, where He felt the wound of thern, The thoughts that sanctify a world this Easter Tide are born.

I listen as the myriad bells take up the glad refrain I listen as the myriad bells the up the glad refrain And mingle with new anthems far beyond the starry plain; With hope, and happiness, and love the earthly chancels glow As Easter tells the story of the Victory long ago; The nations on the mountains and the nations by the sea Together chant the songs that tell of earth's new jubiles; And from afar where sin is not and error cannot hide. From the fresh fields of the Orient, comes the holy Easter Tide.

Now gently bend the cedars where the liv blooms in white ! How tenderly the wild rose grows where He arose that night ! The stars that saw the sleeping guards, the dark centurion's train, With added light and beauty shine upon the orient pian; No longer in their armor watch the soldiery of Rome, Their shields and heimets shining 'neath the vaulted arure dome, The prince of Peace is risen now, and ever if a and wide The bells of earth proclaim anew the saured Easter Tide.

I hear the bells of Easter by the Lake of Galilee, For me they drown the sorrows of the Valo Gethsemane, They sing of One arisen till the matchless music stirs The tender grass in Hebron's vale and Lebanon's proud firs; Methinks again He teaches where Capernaun's waters lie and Judah's everlasting hills seek out the summar sky; and yonder where jerusalem lifted once he head with price, I hear the mingled voices of the old world's Easter Tide.

The every heart this sacred day the holy bells bring peace, And while they ring in Easter's morn let sin and sorrow cases; They voice that wondrous story which the years can ne'sr for get-A story which this world of curs doth cherish even yet; Ring out, O bells of Easter! proclaim on hill and plain How once He broke the boasd of der h and rose to life again; How from Him we get the blessed day we hail with love and pride, As we listen to the voices of the gentle Easter Tide.
