HUMORIST WRITES ROADS SIGNS BETTER THAN HE KNOWS

Hard Road Sense in Fun for the Press

"Bugs" Baer, a well known newspaper humorist, has written and published a series of "road signs," probably merely intended to entertain. But many of them might be erected with benefit to the safety of traffic. "Don't run up your mileage with skids," contains a lot of real caution in tabloid form. "Don't do your thinking with poor brakes," will strike a responsive chord in every man who has near-nervous prostration at the sight of the reckless driver stopping in a hurry. "There are three grades of eggs, but only one grade of crossing and that's dangerous," ought to be posted in the hat of all those who try to "beat the train" across its right of way.

"The glass in your windshield is the same stuff they put in hospital windows. Which will you look through?" is a very pertinent query, and "Fifteen miles an hour may be a chill but fifty is fever," is not too medical to be understood. To towns troubled with too much speeding by tourists, Mr. Baer suggests "Speed limit in this town fifteen miles an hour. One day for seven hotels and one jail, take your very mile over that!" or "We have pick!"

NEM NATIONAL MONUMENT ESTABLISHED IN ARIZONA

President Coolidge by proclamation dated April 18 established the Chiricahua National Monument in the Coronado National Forest, Ariz. This brings the total number of national monuments under the supervision of the Forest Service United States Department of Agriculture, up to 15.

The Chiricahua National Monument comprises an area of about 4,200 acres located in the Bonito and Jesse James Canyons on the west slope of the Chiricahua Mountains, close to the Mexican border. It contains a number of rhyolitic rock formations eroded into peculiar shapes. The most typical formations are pillars of from 6 to 26 feet in diameter and from 50 to 200 feet high. A number of balanced rocks are also within the area, the largest one having a base of 5 feet, a diameter of 25 feet and a height of 30 feet.

The diamond is the hardest substance known.

The Derry Church Is 200 Years Old

vote of the membership for the disposal or sale of a certain number of acres of land restricted to the number now held.

In 1720 the meeting house was built. It was a low, one-story, barn-like structure of logs, boarded up and down on the outside. The building was thirty feet square with a steep roof. The pulpit was a small box, three feet wide, circular in front and so high that the minister's head could only be seen.

The first minister called to Derry was William Bertram, duly and formally installed in 1732. He served until his death which occurred in 1746. His successors were Revs. John Roan, John Elder, Nathaniel Snowden, Joshua Williams, James Russel Sharon and John M. Boggs. The last to be heard in the old church was the Rev. A. D. Mitchell, who preached at late as 1874.

The original building became unsafe on account of age and was torn down in 1884 to make place for the present stone structure.

The latter building was erected by loving hands whose ancestors lived in this community, worshipped in the old church, and whose remains rest in the cemetery near by. Since the completion of the present structure the congregation has had as their pastors, the Revs. Samuel A. Martin, C. B. Segelkin, J. A. McDonald, Geo. S. Rentz and Clarence S. Gee. The present pastor is Rev. R. H. Taylor.

Anyone having relics or anything which may be of interest for the 200th anniversary and is willing to allow them to be displayed at that time, kindly let it be known to the program committee: G. C. Phillips, A. Bowman Snavely, John H. Cope, Mrs. Irvin Slesser and Miss Lydia Weltner, or take them to the church prior to June 27th.

Culture of Mushrooms

Eighty-five per cent of the mushrooms produced in the United States are grown in Pennsylvania. To answer the many requests for information on this crop a circular has been prepared by the agricultural extension department of the Pennsylvania State College, giving directions for the culture of mushrooms. Copies may be obtained free by writing to W. B. Nissley, Vegetable Gardening Extension, State College, Pa.

Guatemala Grass—Feed for Tropics

Guatemala grass, introduced a few years ago by the United States Department of Agriculture from Central America and Mexico, is now being used on a large scale by dairymen in southern Florida. More lately it was introduced into Hawaii and the Philippines. It is considered an extremely desirable forage crop for dairymen in all parts of the Tropics.

The stems of this grass become very thick, as much as 2 inches in diameter at the base, but the whole stem, even to the bottom, is tender and succulent and relished by cattle and many other animals. The grass is extremely leafy and therefore produces a large quantity of desirable feed. The department considers it primarily a grass to feed green and believes it will make excellent silage.

At Miami, Fla., Guatemala grass reaches full maturity, but no germinable seed has been produced there. As a consequence the plant is propagated by dividing the clumps or by using the joints from the lower stem. When joints are used it has been found best to plant them in moist sphagnum or Spanish moss until roots about an inch long have formed; then these rooted joints may be planted in rows 8 feet apart and 3 to 4 feet apart in the rows.

How Large Can Hailstones Be?

The weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture is frequently asked what is the maximum known or possible size of hailstones. According to its records and documents in the Weather Bureau library, the maximum possible size of a single hailstone can be positively stated, but stones larger than a man's fist and weighing over a pound have several times been reported on good authority.

During a hailstorm in Natal, on April 17, 1874, stones fell that weighed a pound and a half, and passed thru a corrugated-iron roof as if it had been made of paper. Hailstones 14 inches in circumference fell in New South Wales, February, 1874. At Cazorla, Spain, on June 15, 1829, houses were crushed under blocks of ice, some of which are said to have weighed four and a half pounds. In October, 1844, a hailstorm at Certe, France, wrecked houses and sank vessels.

Authentic reports of the finding of hailstones much larger than those above mentioned undoubtedly refer in all cases to masses of ice resulting from the coalescence, after falling, of a number of smaller hailstones lying closely packed together on the ground.
