Points to Good Done by Workers' Councils

About a thousand American factories have adopted one form or another of employee representation.

James Meyers, who has observed at first hand the development of industrial democracy, examines the minutes of a number of factories in his article, "Democracy in American Factories," in the Century Magazine.

"A good illustration," he writes, "of the sound sense and business judgment exercised by a straight workers' committee in charge of the management of company houses is supplied by the minutes of a housing committee, one of the subcommittees of a workman's board."

"These workers exhibit no disposition to throw away company money. Profit-sharing is a part of the plan in this mill and forms a strong incentive to economy. Careful, but just, they have, in fact, managed the property entrusted to them conservatively, restricting decorations, making tenants meet the company halfway, standardizing rents, removing favoritism.

The president of this company, after three years' experience in the matter, made the following public statement in regard to workmen's management of company housing:

"The various functions connected with the management of the company housing are performed more efficiently by the board of operatives than they were previously performed by the management, according to our experience, owing to the fact that much more time and thought is given to each individual question, than the management could possibly give to it. There is more satisfaction in the village and the property is managed economically."

AGE AND SIZE OF COCKERELS DETERMINE TIME TO CAPONIZE

Within the last few years the business of producing capons has grown rapidly in this country, and increasing numbers of capons are being raised in the Middle Western States.

The time of year when caponizing should be performed, so far as the effects of the operation and the rapidity and ease of healing are concerned, is of little importance.

The capons seem to recover and do well at any time. Certain other considerations, however, do influence the time, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

The age and size of the cockerel are very important. As soon as the cockerels weigh 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 pounds, or when 2 to 4 months old, they should be operated upon.

The lower age and weight limits apply particularly to the American breeds, while the higher apply to the Asiatics. If smaller than this, their bodies do not give room enough to work handily.

On the other hand, they should never be over 6 months old, as by this time the testicles have developed to a considerable extent, the spermatic arteries carry greater amounts of blood, and the danger of pricking these arteries and causing the fowl to bleed to death is greatly increased.

The fact that capons are in greatest demand and bring the best prices from the Christmas season until the end of March, and that it takes about 10 months to grow and finish them properly, makes it important to hatch the chicks in early spring so that they will be of the proper size for caponizing in June, July and August.

These are by far the most popular months for the operation, though in some cases it is performed still later.

There are approximately 400 establishments engaged in the carriage and wagon industry in the United States.

If the earth had no atmosphere we would be subjected to a constant bombardment of shooting stars.
