KILLING LICE AND MITES INCREASES POULTRY PROFITS

The Bureau of Animal Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agri- Manheim, and Mr. and Mrs. D. A. evening. culture, advises poultrymen to make every effort to rid their fowls of lice and mites early this fall.

Lice and mites multiply faster or will sell separate.

No. 225—Lot 45x150 feet on New they are present when the fowls during the warm weather and if are placed in the houses for laying in the fall they may cause considerable trouble all winter and reduce egg production. Every poultry house should have a therough spraying of an approved coal tar disinfecting solution such as carbolineum at this time for mites. When these pests get firmly established a few hot days may result in the house being completely overrun. It is much easier to keep mites down by frequent spraying in hot weather than to get them under con trol after they have once gotten the I upper hand. To kill the mites the coal tar solution must come into contact with them or the mites will crawl to a safe place. All parts of must be sprayed. In order to kill protected bridge. the lice, each bird should be dusted with sodium fluoride.
