FIVE YEARS OF LIVESTOCK IMPROVEMENT SUMMARIZED

Nearly 15,000 persons living in 752 counties of 46 States, in the District of Columbia, Guam, and Porto Rico have enrolled in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign during five years since its inauguration October 1, 1919, by the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Those who have enrolled pledging to use purebred sires exclusively in their livestock raising, range all the way from boy and girl club members to owners of large ranches. In all, the 14,902 persons enrolled own a total of 525,522 animals and 1,117,928 poultry. This gives an average of 35 animals and 75 poultry to each person enrolled.

On participating in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign the livestock owner lists the number of animals he owns in the different classes of livestock, stating that the males are all purebred and indicating whether the females are scrubs, grades, crossbreds, or purebreds. States shown to have the greatest number of persons enrolled are: Ohio, first, with 2,917; Kentucky, 2,805; Virginia, 2,277; and Nebraska, 1,502.

STATE COUNCIL TAKES ACTION ON FARM ISSUES

The Directors of the State Council of Agriculture Associations met in Harrisburg, November 11, and acted upon several important agricultural issues. Matters pertaining to taxation, rural education, rural electric service, the needs of the State Department of Agriculture, especially in regard to tuberculosis eradication and the control of serious plant insects and diseases, and the requirements of the Pennsylvania State College, particularly with respect to agricultural research extension and teaching, were discussed at length.

Several committees were appointed by the council to investigate and make definite recommendations on special problems. A committee on taxation was named as follows: Fred Breckman, Secretary of Pennsylvania State College, Robert F. Brinton, Chester county, and Robert M. Carrons, Washington county.

In order that the council might take definite steps in regard to the needs of Pennsylvania State College, especially in its agricultural work, the following committee was appointed to look into the requirements of that institution: Miles Breck Horst, Lebanon county; Fred Breckman, Luzerne county; Fred Breckman, Dr. W. A. Haines, Bucks county; and Mrs. John F. Hice, Cambria county. These two committees will report to the council at its next meeting which will likely be held sometime during December.

A general committee was named to compile the various recommendations made by the several committees and the council at large for presentation to the agricultural commission appointed by the last Legislature. This general committee is composed of Morris Phillips, President of the Council, John A. McSparran, Master of State Grange; Miles Horst, Secretary of Pennsylvania Potato Growers Association; Robert Balderston, Secretary of the Interstate Milk Producers' Association; and C. J. Tyson, director, State Horticultural Association.

The council also appointed a committee to draft a final statement on the damage to orchards and farm crops by wild life, especially deer, for presentation to the State Game Commission. This committee consists of Chester J. Tyson, R. T. Crisswell, Franklin county; and Miles Horst.
