Abram Haines, of Newtown, in Wrong

(From Page One.)

Fields, 14 years old, to stop Haines. The youth, who stands nearly six feet tall, executed a football tackle, and brought Haines to the earth with a bleeding forehead. Both rolled down the embankment on the prison grounds, and as Haines attempted to get up, Fields tackled him again. By this time Constable Pennock arrived on the scene and took Haines into custody again. At the same time Constable Steigerwalt drove up in his machine, and the four got in.

"My God, I'm shot," screamed Haines as he was again placed into custody, believing that the blood flowing from his head came from a bullet wound, as the officers had threatened to shoot him if he tried any "monkey business".

While driving the short distance back to the jail, Haines kicked Constable Pennock in the shins and attempted to jump out the back window of the automobile, but without success.

Two minutes later he was under lock and key in the jail, awaiting hearings before Alderman Hinden, of Lancaster, and Squire McCracken of Columbia.

Just before he made his first break for liberty at the entrance to the jail, Haines told the officers how sorry he was for what he had done, and that he had made up his mind to turn over a new leaf after he had atoned for his wrong doings.

He seemed real penitent, and this partly took the officers off their guard.

Haines started his hectic career on Thursday night when he safely escaped from the Columbia police amid open shot and shell. He was arrested last week on a bad check charge and was released in bail for a hearing Thursday night before Justice of the Peace McCracken, on bail furnished by George Seeman, who conducts a restaurant at Thirteenth street and the Lincoln highway.

Haines failed to show up for the hearing and his bondsman was given 24 hours in which to produce the prisoner. At once Mr. Seeman and his son, Lewis, went to Marietta, where they had heard that Haines had been seen. Haines explained that he did not show up because his machine had broken down, and invited the Seeman's into the car, and drove to Columbia.

At McCracken's office a commitment paper for Haines was drawn up, and Haines placed in the custody of Patrolman Buck, who was to take him to the Columbia lockup. Young Seeman stood on guard on the machine's running board.

Haines drove over Third street to Locust, but failed to turn in Market street for the station house. Reaching Fifth street, he quickly slid from under the wheel of the machine and darted into Alley H. Officer Buck darted after, emptying his revolver at the fleeing man, but Haines made good his escape. Seeman was unable to join in the chase, his hand becoming caught in the automobile.

The thwarted officers then evolved a plan to arrest Haines at his home at Droytown, near Mount Joy, and went there early Friday morning. Police Chief Stewart entered the house while Patrolman Thomas stood guard in front of the place, and another man in the rear.

Disappears Again Haines pleaded with the chief for a word in private with a member of the household, and suddenly disappeared. Haines had made his way to the rear of the house and held the officer there at bay with his large pet dog. Haines was nearly a half mile away, running across the fields. The officers gave chase but lost the track.

Since that time Police Chief Stewart, of Columbia, has received six bad check complaints against Haines, and $2,000 addition bail is demanded by the Columbia authorities in case Haines wants his freedom pending hearings. As yet he has been unable to raise bail on charges before either alderman.

In the meantime the Columbia police searched day and night for the escaped prisoner in vain, and the search was joined by Constable Pennock, of Alderman Hinden's office. The Lancaster constable, after

MRS. WILHELMY SAVED BY FRIEND

Doctor Advised Operation Friend Said Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I was all run-down from overwork and worry, had no appetite, could not sleep at night, and looked like a corpse. I have six children (five boys and one girl) and did not get any strength after my last baby was born. I was getting worse and thinner every day. The doctor had told me and she said, 'Now do as I tell you. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I have done. It helped me.' So I started taking the Vegetable Compound and I noticed after the first few bottles that I felt considerably better. After taking 9 or 10 bottles I got over my fainting spells. Everybody who sees me now notices the great improvement in my health. I am gaining in weight and strength and am feeling fine. Eat well and sleep good nights. Any woman can write to me and I will answer her letter." — Mrs. MARY WILHELMY, 309 Duke Street, St. Paul, Minnesota.

working two nights and a day on the case, traced Haine's movements so well that he was able to learn that the man would be at Orange and Prince streets at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Nabbed in Lancaster The constable was there and soon Haines hove into view. The officer nabbed him, read the warrant, borrowed an automobile and rushed his prisoner to Alderman Hinden's office.

This arrest was one of forgery brought by George Schoenberger, of 112 North Water street, who alleges that Haines gave him a forged check for $650 in payment for an automobile. The check bore the name of Haines' brother, John.

Hardly was Haines in the alderman's office when H. A. Earnest, manager of an automobile company, appeared and preferred two additional charges of forgery against the man. Mr. Earnest said that Haines hired automobiles from the company since his escape on Thursday, and paid for them with checks which he admitted in the alderman's office were worthless. The amounts run more than $50.

The $650 forged check, the officers say, was used to buy the automobile now in the hands of the Columbia police. Haines leaving it behind as he fled.

Admits Check Charges While being cross examined by Constables Pennock and Steigerwalt Haines admitted passing a worthless check on the Peoples National Bank, of Lancaster, it being drawn on the National Bank of Mount Joy, in which he admitted he had no funds. He also told the authorities that he was mixed up in bad check cases in the offices of Alderman Burkhardt and Doebler.

After Alderman Hinden is through with Haines he will be turned over to the Columbia police who want him on at least six bad check charges.

Haines declared that girls were to blame for his downfall, as he took the money that he got by passing bad and forged checks and spent it on "the women."

469,833 Dogs Licensed A total of 469,833 individual dog licenses were issued by the State in 1924 besides several thousand kennel licenses. This is 64,000 more individual tags than were issued in 1923 and 175,000 more than in 1921 when the licensing was under county supervision. The list of individual dog tags issued in 1924 and 1923 showing totals for each county has just been issued by John L. Passmore, Bureau of Animal Industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, who is in charge of the dog law enforcement work.

Allegheny County leads the State, having 27,860 dogs tagged, an increase of 207 over 1923. Other leading counties are Luzerne, Westmoreland, Schuylkill, Fayette, Washington, and Berks.

In 1923 there were 12,820 dogs licensed in Lancaster county and last year there were 12,618.

Fire Takes Heavy Toll From Penna.

STATE SUFFERED MORE THAN $31,000,000 LOSS IN 1923 ACCORDING TO NATIONAL BOARD OF UNDERWRITERS

It is evident that Pennsylvania continues to supply plenty of material for the flames to feed on. Any doubt of this fact is removed by the figures of the state's fire waste during 1923, just issued by The National Board of Fire Underwriters. From its Actuarial Bureau, the center of American fire loss statistics, the National Board finds that to the grand total for the United States, $535,372,782, Pennsylvania contributed no less than $31,390,858. (The national figure includes 25 per cent for unreported and un-insured losses.)

This fire loss—which places Pennsylvania second among the forty-eight states—compares with destruction of $19,198,923 in 1918. It thus shows an increase in five years of $12,191,935.

Analysis of the elaborate tabulation published by the National Board establishes the fact that, of the twenty so-called originating causes, "Matches-Smoking" was chiefly responsible for this monstrous wastage. Its share of the damage inflicted was $1,930,732. Following "Matches-Smoking" came "Stoves, Furnaces, Boilers and Their Pipes," with $1,407,034, and "Miscellaneous Known Causes," to which was attributed $1,235,979 loss. All three fell within the "Strictly Preventable" or "Partly Preventable" classifications, which lends support to the contention of fire prevention engineers that fully 75 per cent of the country's perennial fire destruction always is clear ly avoidable, because to that extent it is due to public habits of carelessness and to ignorance.

Turned to use, instead of into smoke, such a sum as Pennsylvania lost in 1923 would have built no fewer than 313 modern, fire-resistant school-houses, at an individual cost of $100,000. Applied to the construction of good macadam roads, to the erection and maintenance of hospitals or to any one of a score of public works, this amount of money would have served the two-fold purpose of improving conditions and at the same time lowering taxes.

Furthermore, there were sundry incidental losses, apart from the main one, that should not be forgotten. All of the property destroyed was automatically removed, at least for a time, from municipal tax rolls, which, of necessity, meant an increased levy upon other property holders. The heavy cost of extinguishing the many individual fires that resulted in the $31,390,858 total is one which must be reckoned with, and this expense, too was borne by the public.

Regrettable beyond everything else, however, and completely overshadowing the combined financial burden, were the loss of life and the injuries from fire, which, in company with the rest of the states, Pennsylvania had to record. To realize that at least three-fourths of the life and property sacrifice might have been avoided by the exercise of care and knowledge, and not to feel strongly the urgency of public instruction in the prevention of fire, is scarcely possible for anyone who has at heart his own best interests and those of his native state.

Little Pigs Need Care Keep pig pens clean, dry and well ventilated. As soon as possible get the pigs out on clean ground so that they can take a lot of exercise. If pastures are available the sow and litter should be placed in them when the pigs are about two weeks of age.

Remove Mulch From Flowers Be sure to rake the mulch off huddleberry borders and flower beds before active growth starts. If this is left on too long it softens he plants. Do not remove the mulch on a bright sunny day.

Preparedness Pays Is the farm machinery ready for field use? Time is precious when field work starts. A few hours spent now putting the tools in shape may save days later.
