JUST CARELESSNESS

Carelessness and ignorance are the two outstanding causes of fatal accidents. A family is destroyed at a railroad crossing because the driver is too careless to take the precaution which would require but a moment of his time. A man is overcome in his garage because he is too careless to open a door. There are a great many things which are not taught in cross-word puzzles which all of us should know.

PARENTS SHOULD HELP

Parents who desire their children to make more rapid progress in the schools, might well ask themselves the following questions:
Have we become personally acquainted with our children's teachers? A few kindly attentions give quite a lift to a teacher who is struggling with a roomful of restless youngsters.
Are we co-operating with school discipline? Do we frequently let the children stay up late at night, thus depleting their energy? Do we encourage the children to think they are severely or unfairly treated, and thus incite them to an attitude of resistance.
Many other questions could be asked. Remember that you can't turn children over to the schools to have their heads filled with knowledge as you turn them over to the dentist to have their teeth filled with gold.

Just give the teacher a little assistance and watch the change in that son or daughter.

MILESTONES

The old historic milestones along the highways of Pennsylvania are to be saved. The State Highway Department has issued an order that no matter how many new and improved ones may be erected, the old markers which told the stage coach traveler how near he was to his destination, shall not be removed. District engineers have been instructed to take steps to preserve them.
It is encouraging to see a growing appreciation of things historical. The old milestones are of little help to the motorist today; to those of us who see them everyday they appear commonplace. To visitors, however, they are quaint novelties, and it should be borne in mind that in addition to its beautiful natural scenery, one of the greatest appeals that this State has to tourists from other sections is its wealth of old land marks, historic places and reminders of another day and the different modes and manners then prevailing.

THOSE NEW STREETS

Since the School Board and Borough Council decided to open a new street on the North and South sides of its plot on the site of the new High School building, a few people have been objecting. When we say a few, that includes all. No one can have a real good reason. Furthermore, it will increase the value of any property if it is located on the corner of a street instead of an alley. Properties not in close proximity to these streets will in no way increase or decrease in valuation on account of the improvements.

This change will be exactly like the uniform curb line on Main street. When the subject was first proposed, how some people objected and not only a few either. But now go along Main street and see how many people would prefer going back to the old way since their eyes were opened.

Go ahead and improve. Make better streets, make more new streets, make our town more beautiful and let the people make their homes more beautiful. All who do not approve of these methods had better move to some mossback town somewhere in the wilderness.

THE PROPOSED CUT

The proposition to cut seven million dollars from the appropriation to the public schools of the state, which was made by an influential group in the Legislature, provoked a storm of widespread protests. At the time it became apparent to the public that the reduction from the budget sent to the Assembly with Governor Pinchot's endorsement was made for factional political purposes, resentment became the more bitter.
The Governor has on various occasions "played politics" does not seem to have any excuse for the effort to make the public schools suffer in order that revenge may be had, and those who were responsible for endeavoring to knife the appropriation are now realizing the error of their judgment.

When the Governor told the public that the original appropriation would not result in the addition of a single cent to taxation, and further that appropriations to several items that were proposed to be cut out entirely in the revised budget would have to be paid, under the law, by the next Legislature with a deficiency bill, his appeal carried weight, and his contention that in the conduct of public education politics should have no place, meets with universal approval.

Pennsylvania's school system is only beginning to measure up to the standard that the importance and wealth of the state should demand. It ranks only seventh in the amount spent on its schools in proportion to the capita of the population, and the survey recently made by experts, which was exhaustive, shows there is much lacking to put us where we properly belong. The first and most essential need for the required improvement is more liberal appropriation, and just when every effort is being put forth to raise the needed funds a proposal appears to cut the budget by more than an even million dollars.

In the rural schools of the commonwealth more than one-half of the teachers are serving their first or second terms, and about the same number are teaching with only partial certificates. The state will not get better teachers nor retain its good ones until it pays better salaries. The report of the survey shows defects in the system from the normal schools all down along the line that call for correction. There appears to be an abundance of executive and administrative ability in the central offices of the Department at Harrisburg, but out in the rural district the system is inadequate.

By reducing the appropriation the Assembly would still further cripple the schools, which together with hospitals and highways should never be permitted to suffer by reason of political quarrels. If the Governor must be punished for some political offenses, let it be some other manner.
