EXTENSION TELEPHONE GIVES FIRE ALARM

Property Loss at Hotel Nipped in the Bud by Peculiar Accident.

Another use was discovered for an extension telephone recently when the telephone operator at the St. James Hotel in New York, plugged in on a signal from the linen closet in the basement and heard a peculiar crackling noise.

On investigation it was found that a fire had somehow got started in the closet and had burned away the legs of a table that was used as a telephone stand. When the telephone dropped to the floor the receiver was knocked off the hook, which flashed a light on the telephone switchboard.

The operator immediately summoned a fire company and this saved what might have been a serious conflagration.

A Local Resident Fleeced by Crook

going to permit him to share the contents of an envelope which they had picked up on the street just a few minutes earlier. This envelope was said to contain two $500 bills and some Liberty bonds.

Taylor fell for the game entirely. He even came to his home here got $15 of his own cash and persuaded his wife to part with her bankroll of $135. He returned to the same corner and informed the two men that he had managed to obtain the necessary cash.

Thereupon the swindlers told Taylor that they must go to the Great building and see their employer to get the two large bills changed. Of course, they took Taylor's $150 with them, with instructions to wait on the corner.

Taylor is still waiting for his $300 share of the money in the envelope and also his own $150. Police are investigating.
