OWL-LAFFS

O. W. L.
(On With Laughter)

I hate to tell 'em on myself but here's one—This morning my spouse said: "Get up, you lazy thing. Why don't you wake up?" I said, "I can't wake up." She asked me why and I told her I wasn't asleep.

The first shoe I dodged but as I came up I stopped the other one.

Here's one Harry Laskewitz pulled on his wife. He asked her if she remembered old man Rosenberg's kid—the fat one. She said "Yes." Harry said: "Well, he's a millionaire." Mrs. Laskewitz said: "Oh, is he?" Harry replied: "No, 'No, Abie."

The fellows down at the Grey Iron—Stoner and all of 'em—would like to know just why Jack Miller cultivates that hair on his upper lip when it grows wild on his chest.

Just the same Mart Metzler declares that some one lost the plunger. Even Jim Dillinger says so.

A fellow went thru town selling moonshine a few days ago. I know a chap bought a quart, took two drinks and saw green cats, yellow monkeys, pink elephants and a flock of wild geese. Wonder what would have happened had he taken a few more?

A certain Sunday School teacher here tells this one: Once upon a time a maiden came to a wide river which had no bridge and she became very angry. She cried: "Dam this river, Dam this river." Her prayers were answered—a tree fell across the river. It was damaged and she walked safely across.

A certain man here missed his train, went back home, unlocked and walked in and to his great surprise found his wife was sitting on his best friend's lap and kissing him. He said: "Well, I've set a trap and caught you." The man replied: "With bait like this you can catch me any time."

A man at Florin took his son to Lancaster and they went to the Fulton. The boy said: "Papa, why do bald-headed men give chorus girls such a good hand?" He replied: "Because nature gave them such good limbs, my boy."

Here's one from the pen of Arnty, down at Troy's garage: A tear for the girl in the Lincoln Who swore she could drive without thincoln While indulging in talk She steered off the dock And the ferrymen claim she's sincoln.

A certain fellow from town returned from a trip to Atlantic City and his wife said: "Why were you chasing those bathing girls at the beach?" He said: "I was enjoying the privileges granted me by the Constitution—life, liberty and pursuit of happiness."

A certain woman here went to Lancaster to the Colonial. The usher told her she would have to take her hat off the seat and put it on her lap. She said: "Wonder how I'm gonna do that when I have no lap." Levi Dillinger told me that one.

"Robin" Fenstamacher says bobbed haired girls make dangerous bandits because they roll 'em down to hold 'em up.

A little poetry by our office devil: I've a funny story to tell Said a tadpole to a snail Just then he turned into a frog And that put an end to this tell.

Paul and Fred, a pair of our types, were out front yesterday noon when two strange girls passed. Paul said: "I'll bet she's a movie actress." "Spook" said: "Why?" Paul replied: "Notice her filmy dress."

A fellow from Elizabethtown asked his lady friend here: "Have you ever been in love?" She said: "That's my business." He said: "Well, how's business?"

I guess you are all thoroughly convinced that crookedness doesn't pay. Do you notice that nearly every cork screw in the country is out of a job.

A young fellow from Milton Grove said to his girl: "Why did you close your eyes when I kissed you?" She said she thought she was in heaven. He replied "Aw, who ever heard of a red-headed angel."

A certain lady here in town went to Constable John Lawrence and said that the young lady next door continually neglects to pull down her shade when undressing. John said: "All right, madam, I'll be only glad to look into the matter."

A certain fellow who has been in the navy for a long time, came home recently. His lady friend said: "I suppose you are accustomed ed to sea legs." He said, "Why I wasn't even looking."

A man we all know very well called at a certain home, took a real stout six year old boy on his lap and while pinching the kid's legs said: "Tell me, who is it that has such nice fat legs?" The boy replied: "Mama".

A little of Joe Moore's poetry: Early to bed and Early to rise And your girl goes out With other guys.

HOW BUSY IS A HONEYBEE? INVESTIGATORS FIND ANSWER

To determine "just how busy the busy honeybee might be," and when and why, was the object of an investigation recently made by scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The scientists wanted to know how many bees worked out from the hive, how long each trip was, what time of day and what time of the season the flights were made, and how much of a load each bee returned to the hive. These facts are to a large degree a reflection of the nectar conditions of the field, and the scientists believed that if a means of counting the bees as they passed to and from the hive could be devised it would open up a new field of apicultural research.

After many trials of various kinds of devices, a "gate" was evolved through which but one bee could pass at a time. In passing in or out of the gate, of which there were a large number to each hive, the weight of the bee caused an electrical contact to be made which operated a recording mechanism.

By knowing the amount of nectar gathered on any day and the total number of bees which return, the minimum weight of the average load carried by each bee can be estimated. The highest minimum average load obtained during the study was on May 22, when 44,597 bees averaged 25.3 milligrams each. The data made possible the conclusion that the amount of nectar available to the bees is indicated by the average load carried by the bees.

In the course of the study it was ascertained that of the 2,434,666 bees which left the hive 3.16 per cent did not return. This would mean that on an average a bee makes about 31.05 trips before death overtakes it. A bee may make a trip lasting anywhere from 8 minutes to 1 hour and 54 minutes, depending on the honey flow. The figures seem to show, however, that even in a heavy flow the bees spend more time in the hive than they do on the trip itself.

Having devised a fairly accurate method of keeping count of the working bees, the department expects to discover, among other facts, just what effect the time of spraying near-by orchards with certain poisonous insecticides may have on the mortality of the apiary. It is believed that bees respond to certain sounds, odors, and other stimuli and that data gathered from counting the activities of the bees will throw light on these beliefs also.

From conclusions which the figures would seem to indicate, the fame of the "busy bee" must rest upon her appearance of busyness only and not upon the size of the pile of honey she leaves for her heirs. For, if we multiply the weight of the average load carried by a bee by the number of trips she makes in her lifetime, it will be seen that individually she is of small importance. Her lifetime accumulation of nectar amounts to but 800 milligrams, or eight-tenths of a gram. At this rate of production it would require the work of 567 bees for a lifetime to produce a pound of nectar.

HOW TO CONTROL INSECT CAUSING WORMY APPLES

The apple maggot, one of the insect pests causing wormy apples which is more or less general through out the State, is the subject of a circular just issued by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. This insect is often known as the "railroad worm" due to the habit of the maggot making irregular dark colored burrows or tunnels through out the pulp of the infested apple. Fruit attacked in this way is made practically worthless and where orchardists fail to follow proper control measures, severe injury to the crop often results. Neglected orchards are more liable to heavy infestation than orchards which are thoroughly sprayed, the circular states.

This destructive insect can be controlled. The recommended control measures are divided into the following three important steps: 1. Pick up and destroy all fallen fruit. 2. Cut down wild or volunteer apple trees which cannot be properly cared for. 3. Follow the poison spray schedule as given in detail in the circular.

The circular was prepared by T. L. Guyton and J. N. Knull, entomologists in the Bureau of Plant Industry. It is sent free to all persons in the State requesting it.

The expression, "Jitney," first came into general use in 1915, when various cities established auto buses giving a ride for five cents.
