Fur Farming Developing
Fur farming in United States and in Alaska is steadily developing, says the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, and certain phases of the industry are becoming a permanent addition to agricultural production. For the year 1924 there were approximately 2,000 fur farmers in the United States and Alaska, the majority of whom were raising silver and blue foxes. The total investment in the business is somewhere between $15,000,000 and $18,000,000.

Western Timber Dying
Because of the unusual drought of last year in the West, more timber has died from the attack of the western pine beetle this season than during any previous time during the past 15 years, according to an observer of the Bureau of Entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The London Morning Post estimates that there are 250,000 Jewish Christians in the world.
