The membership now numbers 30, of which nearly all are fine musicians. This band is already playing very well.

The Lutheran S. S. orchestra, under the direction of Harry K. Way, furnished music for the Christmas exercises held December 23rd. A very good program was rendered.

Save Spring Work Hauling the manure out and spreading it daily on the field during winter saves double work in the spring when every day counts. The manure also does more good to the land than when lying in the barnyard.

VITAMINS IN MEAT DEPEND ON FEED GIVEN ANIMAL

Meat studies conducted by the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, during the last fiscal year have produced a new line of information concerning the food value and vitamin content of meat products.

The proteins in several meat tissues were found to have nutritive values practically the same as that obtained for the total protein in milk.

The concentration of vitamin A in the livers and muscle tissues of pigs proved to be influenced greatly by the vitamin content of the diet.

This was especially true when the same ration was fed to the mother of the pigs for some time before and during gestation and lactation. Though it is generally considered that animals can not store any appreciable quantity of vitamin B, the results of the department's experiments indicate that the hog, at any rate, possesses this ability to a marked degree.

Studies of the flesh and fat of chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, and guinea fowl, revealed a wide variation in amount of vitamin A present, both in the various species and in different lots of flesh and fat from the same species. The investigators attribute the differences to corresponding variations in the vitamin A content of the diet of the birds.

A group of experiments was conducted to determine the physiological effect of rancid fats. Without being actually toxic themselves, such fats appear to destroy the vitamin A in rations to which rancid fats are added.

It Isn't A Man A "windjammer" is the local name in California fruit-growing districts for a machine devised to raise the temperature of an orchard by the process of mixing the fruit is threatened by frost.

Since the establishment of its fruit-frost service in 1917, the Weather Bureau has had occasion to make practical tests with a number of these devices, but up to the present time has not recommended for complete protection from low temperatures. The use of many small orchard heaters is today the only practical means of raising the temperature of the air near the ground sufficiently to protect the fruit on the trees.

GIVE YOUR BATTERY THE PROPER ATTENTION NOW

A large majority of the battery troubles brought to a service station can be traced directly to neglect by the motorist of a few simple details of battery care, states H. E. Garber, Prest-O-Lite dealer of Mount Joy. Failure to take into consideration the effect of temperature variations upon the action of the battery is one of the most frequent causes of trouble, Mr. Garber says.

With the approach of winter, the battery is not likely to give gradual warning of what is happening. Finally, with the first really cold morning, a good many motorists will step on the starter, only to find that nothing happens. A turn of the light switch discloses, perhaps, that there is but a faint glow where a few days ago there was apparently ample light. The battery is "run down," and that's all there is to it!

This need not necessarily happen. It is a matter of the charging rate of the generator, something that may be increased or reduced at will by a simple service station adjustment.

During the winter months, the battery efficiency is lowered, due to the reduced temperature. At the same time, it is during this period that the battery has its hardest work to do. Gasoline is less volatile in winter, the engine is cold, and the battery is old, stiff from congealed oil and grease, and harder to start. Shorter days bring about increased use of the lights. Consequently, the driver will unexpectedly find it necessary to use the hand crank, and drive to the service station to have his battery charged. He will be told that the adjustment of his generator is not suited to winter conditions. The equipment will be adjusted so as to provide an increased flow of current from the generator, the freshly charged battery will be put in place, and the winter's battery troubles are usually at an end.

Adjustment of the generator to provide increased current before the battery falls may save the motorist considerable annoyance. Necessity for this adjustment can be determined quickly by the service station.

Grow Trees and Shrubs Now is the time to start collect hardwood cuttings. The intense cold of February sometimes injures the new wood. Cut in January, this wood is almost certain still to be unharmed. Almost all vines and most shrubs can be grown from cuttings.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has put out approximately 1,000,000 new bills, amounting to $1,000,000,000.
