WEEKLY LETTER WRITTEN EX PRESSLY FOR THE BULLETIN BY DR. DAVID H. REEDER

DANGERS TO LIFE FROM AN NSANJTARY POULTRY FARM Well, well, something new at last? Now, how in the world could an egg be made insanitary, or carry disease, you ask? Well, one of my own little boys came very near losing his life from eating an egg that came from an insanitary poul that came from an insanitary poultry farm. Not withstanding his rich, clean blood and good habits, it took many days and nights of careful nursing to even carry him past the danger point and it was weeks, yes, months, before the same vigorous activity of former days was regained.

What made the egg sick? It was faid by a sick hen. The hen was aid by a sick hen. The hen was nade sick by filth, I traced it all out. The farmer came to me, in-stead of going, as he usually did, to a veterinary. I made a survey of his farm; what I called a sani of his larm; what I caned a sanitary survey. He had a fine new poultry house of which he was proud. He kept it clean, too. His own family were all fond of fresh eggs and ate them almost daily; also some of them were on the lief constantly, and one day sick list constantly, and one day the man who cared for the poultry was taken violently sick, much as my little boy was, while he was working in the field and they had to carry him in. He did not have youth and clean blood to fight with and he is not well to this day. When I was asked to inspect the place, it was because of many of their line blooded chickens were dying and they could find no cause dying and they could find no cause for the loss. It was late in the season, the hens had been turned out of the pens and allowed to roam at will over the yard and barn lot. If you watch a hungry chicken a little while, you will find it digging into the vilest kind of filth for its food. They do not appear to have any sense of smell appear to have any sense of smell or taste, but gobble up anything of the right size. To return to my inspection: found the usual puddle near the kitchen door where the men folks wise, and also the dishwater and much of the scraps were thrown there for the chickens. The barn well. there for the chickens. The barn and pig pen were fairly clean, well cared for, but there was a terrible foul smelling, slimey mud hole just below the tank where the stock was watered. The chickens, however, could easily get all the fresh, clean water they wanted from the tank. I had not yet located the cause for the diseased poultry and eggs. It must be somewhere, and I kept looking, but I surely was puzzled. Finally, in wandering about near a plum grove and some fine looking grape vines, my sense of smell located the old privy. Hidden away from sight for years in a leafy bower, was one of the most degree or and out of the most dangerous and out-landish excuses for decency that I have ever seen in the north. The building was so old and its boards so rotten that the back had fallen away. The chicken tracks told the rest of the story. I don't need to tell you more, but possibly you may not believe it when I tell you may not believe it when I tell you that both the farmer and his wife were very indignant when I tole them the plain honest truth.

I ordered quicklime for immediate use and a carefully built poultry proof fence, until a sanitary privy could be built, without a pit, and I ordered a concrete floor below the horse trough and that the kitchen slops should be carried several rods from the house. After the family got started on the clean-up preposition, there was no let up. Every building on the place was first thoroughly cleaned and then disinfected with the compound solution of cressol, recommended in the Farmers' Bulletin No. 480, and which they made, themselves, at a trifling cost, and themselves, at a trifling cost, and applied with a spray pump. They lost no more chickens and there has been no new cases of sickness in the family made.

has been no new cases of sickness in the family.

What about that sour smelling puddle near your back door? Have you a sanitary privy? Is there a mud hole all around the trough where your cows and horses drink? Clean up. Make a sanitary home of yours.
