The Haines Home, A Real Landmark

(From Page One)

War as Minister of War in President Lincoln's cabinet, had the home built, or rather rebuilt. At what date this took place is unknown to the owner.

The late W. U. Hensel always took his out-of-town guests to see the house. He advised the present owner never to alter its beauty in any way with modern addition.

For years the home was known as the Coleb Way home, named after the first owner. Then the Haines family took possession in 1819.

Cameron's Roses Blooming.

From this time until the present the owner has been named Henry Haines. Two generations of Henry Haines follow the present owner, his son and grandson.

Before his death in 1889 at 90 years of age, Senator Cameron planted trees and rose bushes at the Square, opposite the Haines home. They are flourishing today and, as he talks of them, Henry B. Haines recalls that he watched the old Senator, leaning on a tall staff, plant the trees and flowers.

Although at an extreme age, Senator Cameron displayed the same determination he had shown in Lincoln's cabinet, by walking from Donegal to Maytown in many occasions.

Baird Taylor, Cameron's secretary when the latter was minister to Russia and stationed at St. Petersburg, lived at Maytown. Later he became an author of works on travel.

Assembled Troops

In the Civil War Henry B. Haines marshaled troops from boys of Maytown and vicinity and went into action.

Another Henry B. Haines went into the World War from the old home.

Pictures of soldiers in many costumes of many wars adorn the walls of the ancient home.

While peace and quiet predominates at the old homestead its walls tell the story of quite, determined men who left the green ivy and locust trees for battlefields when the call came.

Another Ancient Building

Nestling back a few hundred yards off the Square is an ancient building of stone once used for a school house, later a rectifying plant and finally a stable.

It is one of the oldest structures in the village, yet it is crumbling from age with apparent little concern given it.

Built back in 1761, according to Joseph S. Strickler, of Lancaster until recently the owner, the structure was used as a school house.

It served as such during the Revolutionary War period and was the school of the scholars who attended class at the school undoubtedly served in the war.

In 1840 the building was used as a rectifying plant and was cured there. The pulley posts still remain intact near the top of the building, at a loft window, where the barrels were pulled up onto the upper floor.

Of recent years the historical old building has been used as a stable.

The structure is in wonderful stage of preservation, and with care will stand for many more years.

Home Health Club

WEEKLY LETTER WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE BULLETIN BY DR. DAVID H. REEDER

PURE BLOOD A DISGRACE:

That apparently was the verdict of the doctors who examined Eugene Zeigler an eleven year old boy of Emporia, Kansas, at the state agricultural college, Manhattan, Kansas recently.

So far as the doctors could find from a careful physical examination the lad was the most perfect specimen of health to be found in the state but his pure blood had not been poisoned with vile diseased matter known as cow pox and there was no vaccination mark or ugly scar on his beautiful skin so he was marked down one point.

If the most thoroughly scientific knowledge of the present day had been understood by the judges and they were honest, they would have given Eugene several extra points for not having the ugly scar which proclaims the vile blood taint of cow pox. Many people, doctors included, never stop to remember that cow pox is the former stage of syphilis and that cow pox is in the most authoritative books on the subject, always spoken of as the cow syphilis and that over ninety per cent of the people that have been vaccinated will give a syphilitic reaction.

Not by the unreliable blood test known as the Wasserman test because that may show positive in one laboratory and negative in another, but by newer and more accurate methods of diagnosis which detects the faintest trace of any disease of any kind in the blood or nerves.

The time will come when the ability to make a correct diagnosis will be the first requisite in the ability of a physician and when that time comes a pure blood clean boy or girl, man or woman will not be discredited because they lack the disgraceful mark of a vaccination scar. Five of my sons have no such scar and never will be so long as I have anything to say about the matter. I would much prefer the slim chance of smallpox.

We frequently see false reports about the U. S. having more smallpox than any other civilized country but statistics prove that in the last official report there were only 132 deaths from smallpox in the whole United States during the year and the present reports coming from Washington indicate still fewer such deaths for the next report.

I am for Eugene Zeigler and for his father Carl Zeigler who must of necessity be a clean man with practical commonsense and courage to save his son from the mark of the beast.

he completely eat up the intervening distance and brought victory to his team and thus covering himself with glory in the eyes of the New York sports writers.

At the Penn relays he helped win a college race, by running in his usual position (anchor). He ran his quarter mile in 48 4-5 seconds which is considered among the fastest in the country.

These fast and thrilling finishes by the young man caused the different athletics clubs to become interested and now, he has received a birth on the Great New York athletic club, which is considered the best in the country.

He not only is a great quarter miler but can step the half mile well under two minutes.

All this glory and success piled upon him does not change his attitude but he has the same quiet and pleasing personality that is admitted by everyone.

Joe, who was captain of the strong Maryland track team, is one of those rare combinations for speed and endurance so seldom unearthed. He holds the South Atlantic record of 48 4-5 seconds in the 440, and runs the 880 in 1:59 3-5.

The censor is the salvation of the English stage.

In America there is a drama that would never for a moment be tolerated in England. Those who criticize English censor have not watched things work in a country where taste is led astray through there being no censor to blue pencil vigorously the efforts of some dramatists.

of the river. These were stationed at various points along the stream from a position south of Columbia to Harrisburg.

A hastily built fort and some other defenses were constructed by the living guards, after which a contingent of troops crossed the river to impede the progress of Confederates. A skirmish took place near Wrightsville, but the Union troops were driven back and about a score of them captured. These prisoners were later released when the southerners returned to York. General Gordon's brigade remained at Wrightsville from Sunday afternoon, June 28, until the next morning, when orders were received to fall back to York to join the main division. The troops then marched to Gettysburg and engaged in that memorable battle.

As far as the people of Lancaster county were concerned, the burning of Columbia-Wrightsville bridge was the most exciting event of the Civil War. Many residents, alarmed at the proximity of the Confederate troops abandoned their homes carrying all their portable possessions.

When it was seen that the arrival of enemy troops in Wrightsville was inevitable, many soldiers and civilians, laden with their possessions, hastily crossed the bridge and hurried fire to it near the York county shore. The conflagration spread rapidly throughout the wood structure, which was soon in ruins. The Confederates trained their small batteries on Columbia, but the cannon balls fell short of their mark into the river. Needless to say when both populace on both sides of the stream awoke next morning to find the enemy evacuating Wrightsville, there was much rejoicing. This southern brigade later took part in the battle of Gettysburg, sustaining heavy losses in that bloody conflict.
